

NEARLY WEDS OWN DAUGHTER

Fiction Outdone by Actual
Happening In Swiss
Village.

PARIS, July 23.—From the town of Appenzell, in Switzerland, comes a curious story of a father who courted his own daughter. In 1887, a kindly butcher at Lucerne adopted a little girl named Anna, whose mother had died just after being deserted by her husband. She was a baby of 6 months at the time. He gave her his own name, and she received a good education. The butcher prospered, and some eighteen months ago bought a large hotel at Appenzell. Anna, now a handsome, intelligent girl, managed the establishment for him. Last May Joseph Muller, who had made a large fortune in America, arrived at the hotel. A young local doctor of good family and the elderly Joseph Muller became suitors for Anna's hand, and in July last the girl chose the latter.

The marriage was fixed for the end of December, but the day before the wedding, Muller, seeing his fiancée wearing some jewelry which seemed familiar to him, questioned her about it. Next day he left for Berlin, and sent a letter explaining that beyond doubt she was his own child, deserted so many years ago, and advising her to marry the young doctor. He enclosed a check for $40,000 in the letter. This week the girl was married to the doctor, but she has not heard of her father since his flight.

SUPPER PARTY OF 6 WED ON SPUR OF THE MOMENT

Young Woman Would Not Take a Dare—License Clerk and Rabbi Routed Out, Do the Rest.

DETROIT, July 23.—At the Ponchartrain is a party made up of six eloping newly-weds from Cleveland. They are Edward Bielewicz and his bride, formerly Miss Ernestine Tausig; Ludwig Herman, his bride nee Miss Helen Seuer, a school teacher, and Daniel Gerson and bride, nee Miss Rae Adelson, a stenographer.

The triple elopement was the culmination of a theatre party and a supper in a Cleveland grillroom. During the evening marriage was discussed.

"Wouldn't it be fun to be married tonight?" said Herman.

"Let's do it," suggested Gerson.

"I dare you," said Herman, addressing the young ladies.

The latter, it is said, refused to take a dare, and in less than a minute the party was whirling away in an automobile to the home of Frank Zizelman, probate court license clerk. It was 1 o'clock in the morning when Gerson alighted from the machine and rang the door bell.

"What's the matter?" said Zizelman, poking his head out of the window.

"We want to get married," said Gerson, bashfully.

Zizelman is an agreeable chap, and in five minutes he was loaded into the machine, headed for the courthouse.

At the court-house Deputy Steuer patrolled the jail corridors, unconscious of the fact that his daughter was scurrying away in the machine to Rabbi Morgall's home. It was 2 o'clock when the party awakened the rabbi, and five minutes later the knots were tied.

The party remained in Cleveland over Sunday, and during all this time families and friends of the sextet were kept in entire ignorance of the triple marriage.
