LAUDS COOS BAY COUNTRY

Editor H. L. Gill of Woodburn, Writes Glowingly of Its Possibilities.

Herbert L. Gill, editor of the Independent of Woodburn, Ore., one of the brightest and most progressive weekly newspapers in Oregon, has been visiting relatives at Coquille for the past few weeks. The last issue of his paper contains a well-written article descriptive of the Coos Bay country, the features of which are carefully enumerated by him and which will be of interest to the older residents of this section. The article is as follows:

"Oregon is certainly a great state with vast and varied resources, and let me parenthetically remark right here that Woodburn as a city and the Willamette Valley as a section is not in the secondary column.

"A smooth sea and easy bars were encountered on my trip on the City of Panama from Portland to Coos Bay, but the heavy swells made the boat, with little freight cargo, rock and roll, yet the writer enjoyed it and was not seasick.

"North Bend was the first harbor reached, and shortly after, three miles distant, came Marshfield, the metropolis and principal trading point for the region. Both towns have a look of prosperity and give evidence of progress and energetic spirit, and in time there will be a grand jubilation over a union of the two municipalities. They, combined, will retain the name of the metropolis of this section provided the building of new railroads does not conflict with plans and mar what looks like a very bright future.

Marshfield Its Metropolis.
"From present indications Marshfield, 5000 population, is and will continue to be the metropolis of the Coos Bay country. With the exception of some old timers who do not wish to see anybody come in, the citizens are progressive and liberal in promoting the town's interests. Much work is being done on the streets. The Smith sawmill is one of the best equipped in the world and a sight worth seeing. North Bend has a better harbor and is a better location for a town. It bids fair to be a formidable rival of Marshfield, but the two towns will eventually be together.

"Coquille, the county seat of Coos, is 18 miles from Marshfield, in the interior, resting on the Coquille River. It is connected with Marshfield by rail and Bandon and Myrtle Point by the Coquille stream. Coquille has about 1,400 population, is growing, inhabited by seemingly contented and sociable people. It has a fine court-house for this part of the country, and on account of the geographical location will probably be the permanent capital notwithstanding the aspirations of other communities, although there is no apparent activity in this respect, but none knows what the future has in store.

"Bandon, the seaside resort, is a go-ahead town of 2,500 souls. It is reached by steamer from Coquille and is 26 miles from the latter. The ride down the river is a beautiful one, passing dense growths of timber, dairy ranches, sawmills, coal mines, cattle and sheep ranches, rich in vegetation and everywhere the beautiful myrtle tree.

"It is an isolated country, but one where the Oregonian makes an easy living, the passing of a small steamer, stopping at every landing for passengers, freight and cream, breaking the monotony. There are lots of fish in the Coquille river, including salmon and salmon-trout. In the hills that shadow the stream are some deer and elk, bear, cougar and other big game.

Enthusiasm Over Bandon.
"One can enthuse over Bandon. It would be an ideal seaside resort were it not for the prevailing wind, but this should be no drawback to those seeking a diversion and health, and it certainly is not retarding the progress of the town, which is going ahead with leaps and bounds. The people there are standing as a unit and there is a look of solidity and permanency that enhances its value in the eyes of the prospective investor. It has several industries and one of the finest as well as most interesting beaches on the coast, far surpassing Newport or Seaside in points of interest. The rock depicts faces of a monk, the praying nun, crouching lion, monkey, hen and chicks, sphinx, different profiles of faces, while there are caves, agates, starfish and other attractive features.

There are splendid campgrounds and the resort is patronized by many from the interior. It is really a better winter than summer resort.
"Myrtle Point, 9 miles up the Coquille River from Coquille, is another point of interest, a ride on the steamer or train to which is a memorable trip. Myrtle Point is a substantial looking town and full of progressive people. Space will not permit of a detailed description of this beautiful ride by steamer through a rich country held back by lack of transportation facilities to the outside.

Great Future Ahead.
"The Coos Bay region has a great future ahead of it and development will startle even the most sanguine there now with what the country really contains. There are vast bodies of timber, coal everywhere of a medium quality, mostly pockets, but some in clearly defined veins, yet in some cases even these are broken. Ranchers are engaged principally in dairying. The people are just awakening to new life and the possibilities of this region. A coast road would mean millions to this section, and a deeper harbor is another requisite for a realization of hopes. Vessels ply from Coos Bay to San Francisco and Portland, and it is the expectation that there will soon be other than coast trade and a regular line of foreign vessels will come here for lumber and other products. San Francisco gets most of the trade of this section chiefly on account of the products being similar to those of Portland, yet Portland is missing much that Frisco secures. The climate is somewhat similar to the Willamette valley with the exception of a little more rain, warmer in winter and cooler in summer. A coming great industry is the manufacturing of furniture from myrtle, a beautiful wood that is found in abundance only in the Coos region. The pieces of furniture, made of this wood, in mission style, are very handsome and much admired. I saw one set of six pieces made for $75 that is worth fully $300. It is a hard wood and resembles lignum vita.

"A visit to Coos Bay and interior points is really worth while, a good outing and very educational. It opens one's eyes to the great and wonderful resources of the State of Oregon, the progress being made in the way of development, and the slowness of Portland in making an

NEWS OF COQUILLE.

Items of Interest Taken From The Herald.

Mrs. L. R. Woodward and brother, Elton Tyrrell of Arago, have gone to Ferndale, Cal., to see their mother who is not expected to live.

Capt. N. J. Cornwall of the tug Hunter, running on the Umpqua, returned from Bandon Saturday where he had been to see how the new tug for his company being built by Mr. Price at his ship yard at Cody's mill is coming on.

Capt. O. R. Willard having purchased the interest of Capt. E. D. Steller in the gasoline boat Wolverine, the latter gentleman, wife and little daughter left for Riddle, Oregon, last week where they will visit friends for a while, after which, we understand, they will return to the Sound.

W. H. Schroeder of this city, went to the Bay Thursday to see what the prospects are for disposing of Arago brick there. He reports that there is demand for brick on the Bay side, and that all that can be in the way is transportation that would be too high. There is no question but the clay now being used at that place is very fine brick material and the time is not far distant when great quantities of them will be used where transportation can be had.

effort to derive benefit from the opening of such a region. It also makes one feel that there's no place like home."

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Would Have Saved Him $100.00.

"In 1902 I had a very severe attack of diarrhoea," says R. N. Farrar of Cat Island, La. "For several weeks I was unable to do anything. On March 18, 1907, I had a similar attack, and took Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which gave me prompt relief. I consider it one of the best medicines of its kind in the world, and had I used it in 1902 believe it would have saved me a hundred dollar doctor's bill." For sale by JOHN PREUSS.

WHAT COLOR IS YOUR LINEN?

Is it yellow, a gray streaked or a dingy blue color? or is it a clear pearly white? When your linen is "off color" it is the evidence of poorly done or insufficient washing. We give the washing part of our laundry careful attention, and with lots of water, pure soap and modern methods succeed in obtaining a most perfect color.
