Oh, What Joy!

"Cured at last! Oh, what joy to think that I have at last been cured of that awful bowel trouble," are the words of A. C. Butler of Cold Springs, Texas, who suffered off and on for twelve months with a disorder of his bowels, and finally, after almost giving up in despair, was cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No one need suffer from colic or diarrhoea, for this remedy always gives prompt relief. For sale by JOHN FREUSS.

The Scrap Book

An Anticipative Burial.

The ship doctor of an English liner notified the deathwatch steward, an Irishman, that a man had died in stateroom 45. The usual instructions to bury the body were given. Some hours later the body was still there. He called the Irishman's attention to the matter and the latter replied:

"I thought you said room 46. I went to that room and noticed wan of thin in a bunk. 'Are ye dead?' says I. 'No,' says he, 'but I'm pretty near dead.' 'So I buried him.'"

MORN.

In what a strange bewilderment do we awake each morn from out the brief night's sleep!

Our struggling consciousness doth grope and creep its slow way back, as if it could not free itself from bonds unseen. Then memory,

Like sudden light, outflashes from its deep. The joy or grief which it had last to keep for us, and by the joy or grief we see the new day dawneth like the yesterday: We are unchanged, our life the same we know.

Behold our life unto our old life true. —Helen Hunt Jackson.

Sort of a Reproach.

A Yorkshire (England) farmer was asked to the funeral of a neighbor's third wife, and as he had attended the funeral of the two others his own wife was rather surprised when he declined the invitation. On being pressed he gave his reason with some hesitation.

"Well, thee sees, lass, it makes a chap feel a bit awkward like to be alius accepting other folks' civilities when he never has nowt o' t' soart of his awn to ax 'em back to."

Not Worth the Offer.

"I was standing out in front one night," said a theatrical manager, "when a ragged little urchin came along with a dog under his arm. The dog was a yellow cur of the mangiest variety I had ever seen.

"'Are you the manager of the show?' asked the boy.

"I told him I was.

"'Well,' remarked the lad, 'I want to see the show, but I hain't got no money. I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll give you this dog if you'll let me in.'"

"I looked at the boy and then at the dog, and my heart melted. 'You can go on in,' I said, 'but never mind giving me the dog. Take the dog along in with you.'"

"The lad went in with the yellow cur under his arm. After the performance I was standing out in front and happened to see the urchin come out.

"'Well, sonny,' I remarked, 'how did you like the show?'"

"'Oh, pretty well,' he said, 'but I'm awful glad I didn't give you the dog.'"

At the Milliner's.

"Yes, I like the hat immensely, but I'm afraid my husband won't care for it."

"But such a love of a hat, madam!"

"Yes; I know. Oh, will you put it aside until tomorrow and I'll bring my husband in."

"Impossible, madam. You had better take it now. It is much easier to get another husband than another hat like this one!"—Woman's Home Companion.

A Warm Corpse.

Some Irish body snatchers had rifled a grave and hid their booty in a corner of the churchyard when it occurred to a half tipsy fellow, who had been watching them unobserved, that it would be pleasanter to be driven back to the nearest town than to walk.

He accordingly secreted the dead man under a hedge and lay down in his place. He was duly transferred to a cart, but when about half the journey was over one of the men who had touched his hand screamed to his friend, "Good heavens, the body is warm!"

Hereupon, in a deep voice, the supposed dead man remarked, "If you had been where I've been for the last two days, you'd be warm too!"

In a moment he was left in full possession of the vehicle.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff's Diary.

Peace on Earth.

Have you ever thought seriously of the meaning of that blessing given to the peacemaker? People are always expecting to get peace in heaven. But you know whatever peace they get there will be ready made. Whatever making of peace they can be blessed for must be on the earth here, not the taking of arms against but the building of nests amid its "sea of troubles" (like the halcyons).

Difficult enough, you think? Perhaps so, but I do not see that any of us try. We complain of the want of many things—we want votes, we want liberty, we want amusement, we want money. Which of us feels or knows that he wants peace?—John Ruskin.

Willing to Compromise.

About the middle of the civil war a freshly appointed colonel with a newly enlisted regiment joined the Federal forces in the far south. One morning word was received that a small detachment of General Wheeler's cavalrymen was on the other side of the hill, and a force started out in pursuit.

The next day the Confederates were reported miles distant in the opposite direction. The third day the Federal and a veteran brigadier for a pleasant ride.

erates, who had been for a week. It was but they got away un-

After it was over the colonel, "Well, what war now?"

"Is Wheeler in the much of the time?" he asked evasively.

"All the time. He's everywhere. What's the prospect?"

"Well," answered the slyly, "I wonder what some way this infernal compromised."

Sure of the Verdict.

A thug with a political York was indicted for stealing a load of hams. The trial evidence against the thug was overwhelming. His lawyer and whispered: "You are a gone goose, nothing for me to do."

But the prisoner replied: "Just you get up there, I make a speech abusing all nesses. Considering the six fee you lose heart pretty quick."

So the lawyer made a most speech. But the judge summed powerfully against the ham.

After an absence of five minutes ever, the jury brought in a verdict "not guilty."

"Well, I can't understand it," the prisoner's lawyer as he court arm in arm with his client.

"I can," said the other, with a smile. "Every man on that job one of the hams."

A Way They Have.

A prominent eastern clergyman—filling in marriage ceremony omit, whenever requested, to be noxious "to obey." One of this clergyman's parishioners took him to about this matter.

"What right have you," he said, "tamper with the marriage ceremony?"

"Oh, well," laughed the minister "that 'obey' is a dead letter anyway. The very best woman in the world promised to obey me eighteen years ago, but she hasn't to this day."

Under Marshall Law.

When James Watson Webb of New York made Tom Marshall of Kentucky a target for his editorial lance, he struck a tartar. Marshall challenged and insisted upon a duel, which was fought near Wilmington, Del.

The principals were stationed ten feet apart and exchanged shots without effect. Marshall insisted upon another shot, and both men fired simultaneously.

Colonel Webb staggered, his seconds laid him on the ground, and the surgeon announced that he was wounded below the knee.

"That was the lowest act of my life," shouted Marshall. "Stand him up again for another shot."

But Webb was unable to stand. He was taken to a hotel, where he was laid up for several weeks, saying to his visiting friends, "I am confined to my bed under Marshall law."

Truth and Bubbling Springs.

Truth! Truth! There is nothing but truth. The spring of eternal youth Ponce de Leon sought was truth, the spring which bubbles deep down in the heart of man—though often never, never reached—and has bubbled there from Adam to Washington, from Galilee to Marconi. With the elixir of truth—the most sustaining of all the tonics—man can never grow old. But he who gives himself to truth must not look for office, for riches or even for popularity.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Where They Keep Things.

A New England clergyman was taking breakfast one Sunday morning in a hotel in a little western town. A rough old fellow across the table called over to him, "Goin' to the races, stranger?" The clergyman replied, "I don't expect to."

"Goin' to the ball game?"

"No."

"Well, where are you goin'?"

"I'm going to church."

"Where do you come from?"

"New England."

"Oh, that explains it! That's where they keep the Sabbath and every other blamed thing they can lay their hands on."

When Webster Dodged.

When Daniel Webster was secretary of state our consul general at Shanghai, having on his hands a hundred or more refractory sailors and no prison, sent the whole lot to the native governor to be confined. They stayed there a little while and then wrenched out of the prison and down the river road in front of the consul's office, each one bearing on his shoulder a pole which he had taken out of the prison stockade. The consul wrote about the case to Mr. Webster, giving the facts and urging upon his attention the disgrace attending the situation. He got his answer:

I have received your dispatch of — date. In writing to the department hereafter please use cap paper, leaving a margin one inch wide all around. Yours respectfully,

DANIEL WEBSTER.

All Paid For.

Elizabeth's mother did not teach her little daughter much that she should have learned about religion, nor did the father.

The other day a guest said to the little girl, "Elizabeth, does your father say grace at the table?"

"What grace?" returned the girl innocently.

"Why?"
