Women's Tailored Suits and Coats Moderately Priced from $10 to $65.

This exquisite translation, is a Paris-American display in the fullest meaning of the word. Paris has inspired, but American workers have repeated the Fashions so cleverly, that side by side one cannot discover which copied which.

You will see here reproductions of masterpieces from Callot, Socurs, Jeanne Lavin, Beer, Paquin, Bernard & Cie, Francis and Badin. The inspiration of these popular French designers gives the mode of dress during the tumultuous times of the French Revolution. This fashion show is unequivocally Directoire.

A man's coat has been the inspiration. The shoulders are mannish, hips small, sleeves long and close fitting, revers pointed and collars high. The girdle and sash recall the military officers' dress of the same period.

Colors are Navy, London smoke, seal brown, olive green and black, and many mixed weaves, with combinations, of chevron and herringbone patterns.

Prices are much lower than any we have shown in previous seasons, and certainly as low and in some instances lower, when the tailoring, style and material are considered, than any other store in America. Broad statement, you say? Possibly, but to test the truth of it, all we ask is an inspection of the garments and an unbiased comparison of prices.

You Want to See Our Display of School Clothes Made from the Ladies' Home Journal Patterns

Tomorrow morning we will have on display at our Pattern Counter an assortment of model school dresses made from the Ladies' Home Journal Patterns.

These dresses, while simple and plain, are easily worth $5 to $8 each, yet each of them can be duplicated for almost half its value if you make it yourself from patterns and material now showing in our store.

If you have never made your children's clothes, now is a good time to try your hand. The Ladies' Home Journal Patterns are as simple as A-B-C, but if you are not sure just how to begin, come see these pretty garments and make one up yourself.

Examine the garments carefully, ask the pattern saleswoman to show you the patterns from which they are made up, then get the price of materials and figure for yourself just how little it will cost.

This display illustrates most forcibly the possibilities of these patterns when used with appropriate materials. Don't fail to see this extraordinary display, and get pointers on how to make up your children's dresses yourself, and without the aid of a dress-maker.

NOTE—The garments on exhibition will be sold at the close of our Anniversary Celebration at actual cost of material and labor. If you would like one reserved leave your name at pattern counter.

Several dozen ladies' new German Silver Silk lined purses, just now all the rage of New York, will be offered for the first time in this store Wednesday morning.
