AT THE THEATRE.

Well! Did you see the Margaret Iles Company play "The Great Strike" at Odd Fellows Hall last night? If you didn't you should have. It was great. If you didn't see it ask any of your friends who were there and they will tell you the same as we do—it was great. The play is not a hanky-panky melodrama that deals with labor versus capital. The Iles company deserves better patronage than they are receiving in Marshfield, but it is certain that when the people get to understand that this company, which has been here for quite a few months already, and intend to stay here and leave their money here, the people will turn out better. They are giving the people of Marshfield good shows, as good as you can see in Portland or San Francisco by any repertoire company.

The same piece will be produced tonight and as a big crowd is expected, go or telephone to Lockhart-Parsons Drug Store and order your tickets.

PRAISE FOR MARSHFIELD.

A representative of the Herald visited Marshfield last week and was very much surprised at the way in which that city is building up. The large stone and concrete buildings are certainly fine and show enterprise as well as good faith in the future prosperity of the place. The new street paving with the bituminous rock is certainly fine, being equal to that found in the large cities.—Coquille Herald.

MADE UNIQUE TABLE.

George Ayre Completes Tedious Task of Two Years.
 One of the most unique tables ever seen in this section has just been completed by George Ayre. It is all his own handiwork and while only about the size of the average sitting room table, it is composed of over 1,000 pieces, representing several hundred different kinds of wood. The top is inlaid with various kinds and colors of wood in checker-board style and was polished by hand. About four dozen different kinds of wood grown in Coos county were used in the table. The other varieties were picked up here and there by Mr. Ayre during his travels around the globe. The work of putting the table together represents his odd moments in the last two years. The table is now on exhibition at the Red Cross Drug store, and is attracting much attention.

He wanted an injunction issued until the case could be tried.

The lawyer hunted all over the court-house for the Judge and finally found him in a barber shop. His Honor's face was smeared with lather and the barber was busy. The lawyer stopped the barber long enough to introduce himself to the Judge, and then, as the barber went on with the shaving, the lawyer argued his case.

The Judge then announced his willingness to issue the restraining order. The barber raised the Judge in his chair long enough for him to sign the injunction order. The lawyer went back to the court-house while the barber finished the shave.
