The policy of the Coos Bay Times will be Republican in politics, with the independence of which President Roosevelt is the leading exponent.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET

For President, WILLIAM H. TAFT, Of Ohio For Vice President, JAMES S. SHERMAN, Of New York. Presidential Electors, J. D. Lee, of Multnomah county. F. J. Miller, of Linn County. A. C. Marsters, of Douglas county. R. R. Butler, of Gilliam county.

EVERY REPUBLICAN'S DUTY.

"The shallows murmur while the deeps are dumb" is a saying to be kept in mind in the present stage of the national campaign. The firm, settled purpose of the great majority of voters that Republican rule shall continue, that Taft and Sherman shall be elected president and vice president of the United States and that the candidate of free silver and free trade, of financial chaos and public discredit, shall not be allowed to make the national government a subject for his mountebank schemes and crazy experiments accounts for much that is called apathy. A large proportion of the voters do not deem it necessary to advertise their own sanity by demonstrations such as have attended great crises in the past. They regard the two previous rejections of Bryanism as proof abundant that the coming election will go the same way and that the country is in no danger of surrender to the twice beaten charlatan, whose political record is the best evidence that he has no real principles and is willing to be anything that he thinks will tickle the galleries. That this feeling is prevalent is obvious to any one taking the trouble to make personal inquiry among business men, workmen and the professions.

It is not well, however, that Republicans should be content with meaning to do right themselves. The number of those who are liable to be influenced by Bryan's sophistries, by his utterly unfounded but constantly reiterated aspersions, his plausible fallacies and deliberate falsehoods, although small as compared with the total of the electorate, is not to be ignored, and no effort should be spared to bring them to a due appreciation of their obligations to the country and to themselves. The time has come for every Republican to make himself a missionary in behalf of Taft and Sherman, to speak out his own thoughts and to influence as far as possible the opinions of others concerning the issues at stake in the pending campaign. The fact that intelligent citizens everywhere believe that Taft will be elected is not enough. The voting population includes a considerable proportion of those who require some stimulus toward a correct and comprehensive grasp of what is at stake in the contest, of the widespread disaster that Bryan's success would bring upon business, now happily emerging from recent depression; of the collapse of the structure of national credit that his mere presence at the head of the government would undoubtedly involve, of the utter untrustworthiness of the man and of his cowardly refuge in reckless denunciation and prevarication to divert attention from his career of blundering egotism.

Don't rest with being right yourself. See that your neighbor is right. He will listen to you if you frame your arguments in frank and friendly expression. Facts and reason are all with the Republican party and its chosen leaders, and a clear, temperate presentation of the facts cannot fail to impress. Every Republican, we repeat, should be a missionary for the cause and the candidates of the Republican party and not of the Republican party alone, but of a host of others who will help to swell the vote for Taft and Sherman, for efficient and impartial administration, for a "forward march" and not a retreat in the country's progress at home and abroad—for, in a word, all that goes to make the United States the best country to live in on the face of the globe.

GOOD EVENING.

Books are the visible souls of men, and a good book, like a good life, is filled as a lamp with light. DR. GEIKIE.

The Three Conditions.

Good poems are not written By the comfortable man, Who feels the balm of perfect calm Throughout his being's plan. But let some pleasure shake him With sudden joy egad, I'll write in style that's worth the while, When I am glad!

Or let a blighting sorrow Descend upon my head, That makes me reel with pain and feel I would be better dead— Then when the world is worthless, And life no more can add A heavier wrong, I'll write good song When I am sad!

But, let the world insult me With foul injustice done By deed or pen to fellow men (Or me), look out for fun! Oh, then the hidden genius Breaks forth in me, my lad— I sure can do a thing or two, When I am mad! ANON.

A dispatch from Helena tells of a man being blown up. It's dollars to doughnuts he was married.

A Chicago woman left her husband $1 in her will. Perhaps if he hadn't left her so much while she was alive she would have done better.

Ted—"What became of that fellow who used to rock the boat?" Ned—"Oh, he's rocking the cradle of the deep."

There is really no way of ascertaining whether the man who has had no vacation wants it any more than the man who has had one wants another.

Three pretty girl immigrants were married on a steamship. This beats the groom who got his girl in a bathing suit and then took her out to sea.

Mrs. Midge—"I wonder what in the world Jonah thought when he was swallowed by the whale?" Midge—"He probably had an idea that he had got into a sheath gown."

"How much did you pay the minister when we were married?" a Coos Bay woman asked her husband the other evening. "He fined me $5," the husband replied without looking up from his paper.

"You are not very enthusiastic about the election." "Nope," answered Farmer Corn-tassel. "The nearest I kin ever got to enthusiasm in any election is to persuade myself to cheer up an' hope for the best."

"Susie," said Mrs. Sincaller to her daughter, "you need not be so crazy after the boys. There are always plenty of men. You look a good deal like me and I got married." "But, mother," replied Susie, "you married father."

They were speaking of a new acquaintance at the Millicoma the other evening when Russ Tower remarked to John Goss, "and so he didn't impress you favorably then." "No," Goss replied, "he's just a bungalow." "A what?" Russ questioned. "A bungalow. He hasn't any foundation."

DANGER FROM HOUSE FLIES

Marshfield City Board of Health Outlines New Phases of Menace of Insects.

To the public:—

The International Congress on Tuberculosis held at Washington, D. C., from September 28 to October 3, 1908, reported investigations on the dissemination of tuberculosis by the common house fly as follows:

- 1. Flies caught in the open air do not contain any acid-fast bacilli (germs) that could be mistaken for the bacillus of tuberculosis. 2. Flies that have been fed on sputum evacuate considerable quantities of bacilli in their excretions. The bacilli appear six hours after their ingestion of the sputum and some may be found as long as five days later. These flies therefore, have plenty of time to carry these bacilli to a great distance and to contaminate food in houses apparently protected from contagion, because not inhabited by a consumptive. 3. Food polluted by flies that have fed on sputum contains infective bacilli and produces tuberculosis in guinea pigs. 4. Flies readily absorb bacilli contained in dry dust. 5. Flies caught at random in a hospital ward of consumptives produce tuberculosis in the guinea pigs. Conclusions.—The sputum and excretions of tuberculosis subjects must be disinfected; flies should be destroyed as completely as possible; foodstuffs should be protected by means of covers made of wire gauze. In connection with the above important findings of the congress, the City Board of Health desires again to call attention to the great necessity of exterminating flies and keeping them away from food stuffs and eating utensils; keep them out of your house and destroy their breeding ground which is decomposing animal and vegetable matter. Refuse matter from the kitchen thrown in the back yard and similar sources of filth are productive of danger to the inhabitants in the neighborhood and should be energetically removed. Spittle and excretions from sick patients should be disinfected and rendered harmless by appropriate measures.

Prentis N. Gray Gives Out Interview At Portland.

The Portland Telegram says: "Among the Alliance's passengers was P. N. Gray, secretary and treasurer of the California & Oregon Coast Steamship Company, owner of the Alliance and Nome City. Mr. Gray has been in the Coos Bay country from San Francisco for several weeks, looking into the trade possibilities of that section. He says it is a great and growing region, with which Portland merchants ought to be in closer touch. "By the purchase the other day of half the output of the new white cedar shingle mills at Bandon, Portlanders took a step in the right direction toward increasing the commerce between Coos Bay and the Oregon metropolis," said Mr. Gray this morning. "Portland should get practically all of the trade down that way. But San Francisco appears to have secured a strong foothold there. It would be the easiest matter in the world for the merchants of this city to dislodge the Californians from that field if they would go about it in a determined manner. It is much closer to Portland, and this city enjoys every natural advantage to win the business."
