THE NEW SCHOOL OF DOCTORS.

Recently compiled statistics show that the medical schools of the nation have awarded over 4,000 diplomas less this year than in 1906 and 1,674 fewer than were granted last year. The record was broken in 1906 when diplomas were awarded to 25,204 young medical college graduates, many of whom in the opinion of the American Medical Association, were not properly equipped for the serious duty of caring for the ill.

The unusually large crop of fledgling physicians in 1906 started a crusade for the investigation of some of the many schools of the country that granted diplomas after a two or three years' course of study that was never very exacting in its requirements. The leading physicians still insist that about half of the 160 medical schools of the country "have no moral right to exist," but the agitation of the subject has resulted in a lengthening of the course of study and a stiffening of the requirements to graduation. Higher standards are imposed and the public as well as the profession will be benefited by the change.

One of the requirements of most of the high grade medical colleges of the day is that the students shall be college graduates before they enter upon the medical course of study. The effect of this is to start the new medical student in the study of his profession with a mental training that will enable him to have a better understanding of the newer pathology and the more advanced work of medical research. With this change comes the passing of the old country doctor, the man who was a guide, counselor and friend, as well as the physician of his patients. His school of training is practically closed to the medical student of today, and the fact will be regretted by some of the older folks. The old country physician knew men and women, even if he did not know as much of science as the holder of the medical diploma today. While he may be passing, it is refreshing to learn that his successors will hereafter be thoroughly trained and educated men and not the graduates of colleges that have been organized as diploma mills.

WITH THE TOAST AND TEA

GOOD EVENING.

Somebody did a golden deed; Somebody proved a friend in need; Somebody sang a beautiful song; Somebody smiled the whole day long; Somebody thought 'Tis sweet to live; Somebody said 'I'm glad to give'; Somebody fought a valiant fight; Somebody lived to shield the right; Was that somebody you? —Selected.

"I love you, dear!" There is no phase so worn and old In all the world, nor one so sweet To lover's lips or maiden's ear. As this refrain: "I love you dear."

"I love you dear!" There is no change as time goes on, No new words seem to mean so much As when they're uttered fondly near In trembling tones: "I love you dear."

"I love you dear!" No night so dark, no day so long, But hope brings comfort to the heart, If only "some one" standeth near To murmur low: "I love you, dear." —ANON.

There was appointed by a San Francisco church a committee to get subscriptions for a chime of bells. They had seen nearly all the congregation. When they went to see a rather tight-fisted member they told him they would like a small amount toward it. He promised to give as much as he could, but he said: "Don't you think it would be cheaper to put a whistle in?"

THE POET'S CORNER.

Though prosperity's returned, Even yet it's right hard sledding For some young folks who have yearned For a nice November wedding. W. H. KENNEDY.

"I have my eyes on you!" The young man sang. Said she: "You are very slow, For my other beau Has a band of gold on me!" —REX LARGE.

Content the kicker doth decide, Is quite a power for harm. This tendency to point with pride He viewed with alarm. —THE CRITIC.

Trouble makes a lot of noise; Hardly ever hear our joys! Trouble is a rampant fellow; Joy is gentle, joy is mellow; Trouble talks with roar of thunder; Joy is soft as whispered wonder; Trouble makes a lot of fuss; Joy does 'does quiet good to us. —THE OPTIMIST.

Said the winsome little maiden; "If the kiss is microbe-laden, Then this kissing's unhygienic, there is no doubt, But, considering circumstances, I prefer to take my chances, Than to catch the 'Old Maid Microbe,' as I might without." —GEO. GOODRUM.

We do not always get the girl For whom we do clamor, Which goes to show that life is no True melodrammer. —W. J. CONRAD.

Something for nothing They offer us yet; But, to be terse, 'Tis the reverse We mostly get. —W. F. MCKEE.

There once was an old army colonel, Whose wit was a wellspring etolomel; But for those who would shirk From their authorized work, His language was something infolomel. —TOM BENNETT.
