BRYAN TALKS OF OIL DEA

Democratic Leader Makes Public Capital Out of Rockefeller Statement.

[By Special Correspondent] NEWARK, Oct. 16.—On the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the death of William H. Sylvis, Bryan delivered the following speech:

"The issue of the oil problem is one of the most important issues of the time. The people of the United States are called upon to decide whether they will have cheap oil or not. The oil companies are trying to drive the people into the hands of the government. But the government is not strong enough to do anything about it. The people must act for themselves."
