

FINANCIAL

STRENGTH

In a bank lies, first, in the ability and experience of its officers. "The men behind the gun;" second, its board of directors who advise with and direct the officers; and third, the Capital.

LIBERALITY—In a bank is its willingness to furnish funds to depositors to assist them in carrying on their legitimate business. Our motto is:

"STRONG AND LIBERAL"—Look us up and if you find us deserving, give us your business.

Drug Talks

"THIS IS THE BUSIEST store I have seen," said a man—No matter what I find in other places you always seem to be awake here—Wide awake! Yes, you cannot come inside the door without feeling the stir and spur of our wide awake business.

IT IS IN THE NEWNESS OF OUR GOODS and not merely because they are new but because they show themselves unquestionably to be of the highest quality obtainable—fine—carefully chosen—the choicest qualities as well as the newest of the world's products.

IT IS IN THE ALERTNESS, the courtesy, the intelligence and the thoroughness in serving and waiting on you as soon as you get in our store.

IT IS IN THE UNMATCHED REASONABLE PRICES made possible by large and careful buying and by means of our close connection with other large buyers that we command the best prices obtainable.

THE store is WIDE AWAKE in every fiber. It starts the new season with the best assorted stock of goods in our business history or for which we ever asked public approval.

OUR STORE has grown brighter and better and more interesting than ever before.

DROP IN AND SEE us in our new dress.

"CATTY" WOMEN DROVE HER TO MASQUERADE AS A MAN

REMARKABLE STORY FROM

REAL LIFE OF A WOMAN WHO WORKS AS A MAN AND COURTS OTHER WOMEN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—"It was the meanness of women that drove me to masquerade as a man for fifteen years. Women are merely walking advertisements for the dry goods merchant, the milliner and the jeweler. They are 'catty' but poor things, they can't help it. They talk scandal behind each other's back and make drudges and slaves of their own sex who are unfortunate enough to work for them. In every manner conceivable women show themselves to be inferior to man."

Miss Johnson, or "Frank Woodhull" as she prefers to be known, is now on her way to New Orleans, there to continue to live and to work as did Gautier's famous character, Mademoiselle de Maupin, in men's clothes.

She pulled up her trousers a little, to keep them, as she explained, from bagging at the knees, and now and then she tugged at her silken mustache.

"You see," she said, "I have cultivated all the little mannerisms of men. I don't smoke or drink, but I do shave once in a while as a matter of form. A man must carry a razor, mustn't he? I know both sides of women," she continued. "When there's a man around, she's all taffy and molasses but when he's away and she's with her own sex, she turns as from sweet cider to vinegar. Many women, believing I was a man, have sought to win my affections. I have taken them to the theatre and supper, and then excused myself with the words, 'my wife is waiting for me,' much to their consternation."

I've learned, for I'm anything but good looking, that a woman will accept a man's attentions no matter if he looks like a monkey, provided he spends money on her."

Tells of a Silly Woman.

"In Paris, I used to sit at the Cafes along the boulevards and watch the gay throngs. To the Parisians I was just a plain little man, with glasses, who slipped vichy. I couldn't speak French, but I asked an American lady to accompany me to the theatre. What a silly thing she was. She flirted desperately with me, and mind you, she was a New Yorker, and her husband was on this side.

"When I was a girl, I remember envying father his lot. He lived calmly and seemed to enjoy life in a philosophical way, whereas mother fussed through it. I never liked to sew. Mother used to try to make me stitch on the quilts, but I declined.

I enjoyed much more using a hammer and nails like father.

"Until I was 35, and I am now 50, my lot was a hard one. My parents died and I was left alone. I came from Ontario, Canada, to the states, and found work as I could. I always worked under women and found them slave drivers.

"Finally I took the step and blossomed forth as a man. Nature had given me a suspicion of a mustache, and I cultivated it. My hands and feet are stiff and swollen with rheumatism, so I found it easy to wear men's gloves and shoes. The rest was easy. But I tell you, collar buttons gave me more trouble than anything else. No wonder men lose their tempers. I had trouble in learning to shave. Now I use a safety razor. Once in a while I buy a fashion magazine, so you see the feminine instinct is not entirely subdued."

Although she had no difficulty in deceiving men and women, Miss Johnson admits that the sharp eyes of children have several times penetrated her disguise. Little boys and girls have occasionally said to her, "Oh, you look like a woman." She has had to be on her guard with them.

Miss Johnson then told how she felt when she failed to pass inspection at Ellis Island.

"The moment I entered the room," she said, "I had a chill. Something seemed to tell me that my days as a man were over. They do scrutinize you so closely, and my voice never sounded so ladylike. I wonder what I can do to change my voice. And my hair. It will stand out straight in the back despite the barber, for I wore my hair in a knot for so long. But the officials here have been kind to me. I'm so afraid I will be recognized when I return to my work. This being detained is like being kept in prison. I hope I'll get away soon."

Released by the Officers.

And Miss Johnson's wish came true, she was taken to the hospital to appear again before the board, and inquiry into her case having been made later, she tripped down the walk from the hospital to the boat landing wearing her masculine attire. She had been discharged and was now free to go where she choose, in whatever attire she choose.

As she had the sympathy of Commissioner Watchorn and the physicians at the hospital, immediately after her discharge she was taken on a special boat to the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City, there to board the first train for the south. It was said, however, that she would stop over for a few days in Newark with a family that has offered to befriend her. Once in New Orleans she will continue to work as a canvasser.

MORSE TRIES TO SAVE SELF

NEW YORK FINANCIER NOT PERMITTED TO INTRODUCE EVIDENCE REGARDING RIDGELY'S PART IN FAILURE.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Charles W. Morse, the financier who is being tried for violation of the national banking laws, denied the statement alleged to have been made about him by A. H. Curtis, his co-defendant, that he had "busted" the National Bank of North America. Morse started to explain that the bank was never "busted" when he was stopped by an objection by the prosecution. The prosecution also succeeded in excluding the conversation between Morse and Comptroller of Currency Ridgely. Ex-congressman Littlefield, counsel for Morse, stated to the court that by this conversation he desired to prove that Ridgely not only absolved Morse from all responsibility regarding the condition of the bank but even discussed going into the banking business with Morse.

WHITE GIRL IN BONDAGE

PASSENGERS ON TRAIN NEAR OGDEN TAKE UP CASE OF CHILD ILL-TREATED BY CHINAMAN AND WHITE WOMAN.

(By Associated Press.)

OGDEN, Utah, Oct. 30.—Passengers on the west bound train leaving here this morning appealed to the local authorities to release a 14-year old white girl from the bondage of a chinaman and a white woman. The girl had cried for assistance but was not allowed to leave her berth. The passengers took up a subscription with which to send messages to Chicago newspapers to find out if a child answering such a description had been abducted. The local officers were notified, but they acted too late. Superintendent Mason ordered the railroad detectives at Monticello, 100 miles west of here, to investigate and if they think it advisable to accompany the child to San Francisco and there make a further investigation.
