TRAMP WON'T QUIT TRAMPING

is the Life—"All Novelty and Mind Is Free From Care," Dalton Says.

LOUIS, Nov. 5.—On the way everywhere to anywhere, Jack Dalton, "floater" and "champion printer of the world," passed through St. Louis.
Dalton is forty-six years old. For seven years he has been a de-floater wherever the winds of heaven blow him. He has been in the world several times, is drifting, and expects to drift as long as he lives. He is a tramp because he likes the life.
"Tramping" is the most beneficial earthly life there is," he says. "I am an Irishman. Anyone can tell that by the humorous, laughing expression of his face. He was in his shirtsleeves when he came here. He wore an old straw hat. The collar of his shirt was turned down at his neck, and his duck trousers that once were almost black.
"I would you rather tramp than be a doctor and be decent?" he was asked. "Why, of course, I would. The tramp is the only real aristocrat. He has no boss. He sleeps when he likes to. He eats when he feels hungry. When he is tired of one place he gets up and goes. His life is full of change and novelty. It is all new and interesting. He hasn't a care. Now isn't that better than trying yourself to one place and being a slave to business, as you are?"

Decided to Live by His Wits.

He said he had a good education and that after he had learned printer's trade and had worked at it a while he became a philosopher and decided to live by his wits.

"I'm what you might call a miscellaneous character," he said. "I'm the nearest approach to the wandering minstrel of the Middle Ages that you could find in these days. I am a professional story-teller in my own way. Wherever I go the people are sorry when I leave. You see I have been all over the world. I never forget a thing and I'm loaded with anecdotes and folks are glad to feed me and give me all I can drink in return for my entertainment."

"Oh, you drink, do you?"
"Drink? Why, I haven't been sober in years. Whiskey has prolonged my life. I drink it all the time, and I drink it straight, without water or chasers. I travelled a year and a half with Francis Murphy, the great temperance lecturer. He used me as a terrible example. Fact, I assure you. I stayed with him because I got drunk every day and then in the morning I would get up and make a spiel and sign the pledge. But I always broke it the next morning. It was great.

"I've been up against it all, the rough, the smooth, the slick and all. In elocution I don't take a back seat from any one. I am the only American that ever made a home rule speech in Ireland.

"I made it in a blacksmith shop in Wicklow when I was tramping through Ireland. And I made such a hit that John Moore, a man had made his fortune in the gold fields of Australia, took a liking to me and kept me in his house for six months. That's what education and wit will do for a man. Oh, I tell you I've put my education and experience to good use."

"Why are there so many tramps in this country?"
"Because tramping is such a fine life."

Take me, now; I'm a pioneer and an adventurer, I always wanted to travel to some place and I haven't found it yet. I've been haunted from one place to another all my life, and I'll keep it up till I go back to Mother Earth. Once in Birmingham, England, I walked up and down the docks debating in my own mind whether I'd go to London for the summer or go to Chicago for the World's Fair. I decided to go to Chicago, and in two weeks I was there."

"How did you get there?"
"That's a part of my trade. I can travel anywhere in the world as fast almost as if I paid my way. I was in Oklahoma when the Strip was opened; I was in London at the Queen's jubilee and again when Edward was crowned; I saw the funeral of Cecil Rhodes in South Africa; I came across the Pacific ocean on the same steamer with Kipling; I was in Calcutta during the famine and managed to beg a good meal or two every day; I was in Havana during the Spanish-American war.

"We're weak, poor mortals, all of us, and are controlled by a power higher than us, and we can't help what we are, and that's a fact. Don't you doubt it. It was cut out for me to be a tramp, and I am one, and I couldn't be anything else if I tried, and I don't want to try."

A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Each recurring attack of rheumatism makes the disease harder to control, but the fact that it is not in itself dangerous causes people to neglect it, awaiting a change or a settled condition of the weather for relief. It is often only after the disease has become so serious as to interfere with business that the sufferer will seek more than temporary relief. Chamberlain's Liniment is a remedy for rheumatism which any one can apply. It not only gives prompt relief from pain, but in a large majority of cases it brings about permanent results. The first application will surprise and delight you as immediate relief is almost sure to follow. For sale by JOHN PREUSS.
