TIMBER SUPPLY OF UNITED STATES.

We are now cutting timber from the forests of the United States at the rate of 500 feet board measure a year for every man, woman, and child. In Europe they use only 60 board feet.

Few statements could be made which would better convince the average man that this country leads the world in the demand for timber. It is made by Treadwell Cleveland, Jr., in a circular which treats of the conservation of the forests, soil, water, and all the other great natural resources, which has just been published by the United States Forest Service. In speaking further of the consumption of timber in this country, Mr. Cleveland says:

"At this rate, in less than thirty years all our remaining virgin timber will be cut. Meantime, the forests which have been cut over are generally in a bad way for want of care; they will produce only inferior second growth. We are clearly over the verge of a timber famine.

"This is not due to necessity, for the forests are one of the renewable resources. Rightly used, they go on producing crop after crop indefinitely. The countries of Europe know this, and Japan knows it; and their forests are becoming with time not less, but more, productive. We probably still possess sufficient forest land to grow wood enough at home to supply our own needs. If we are not blind, or willfully wasteful, we may yet preserve our forest independence and, with it, the forest of our great industries.

"Present wastes in lumber production are enormous. Take the case of yellow pine, which now heads the list in the volume of annual cut. In 1907 it is estimated that only one-half of all the yellow pine cut during the season was used, and that the other half, amounting to 8,000,000 cords, was wasted. Such waste is typical. Mr. R. A. Long, in his address on 'Forest Conservations' at the Conference of Governors last spring, pointed out that 20 per cent of the yellow pine was simply left in the woods—a waste which represents the timber on 300,000 acres.

"The rest of the waste takes place at the mill. Of course, it would never do to speak of the material rejected at the mill as waste unless this material could be turned to use by some better and more thorough form of utilization. But in many cases we know, and in many other cases we have excellent reason to believe, that most, if not all, of this material could be used with profit. It is simply a question of intelligent investigation and, more than all, of having the will to economize.

"But there are other ways to conserve the forest besides cutting in half the present waste of forest products. The forest can be made to produce three or four times as rapidly as they do at present. This is true of both the virgin forests and the cut-over lands. Virgin forests are often stocked with first-class timber, but this stock has been laid in very slowly, on account of the wasteful competition which is carried on constantly between the rival trees. Then too, in the virgin forests there are many kinds of trees which have reached maturity and stopped growing, and these occupy space which, if held by younger trees, would be yielding in a new stock constantly. As regards the cut-over land, severe cutting, followed by fire, has checked the growth so seriously that in most cases reproduction is both poor and slow, while in many other cases there is no true forest reproduction at all at present, and there is but little hope for the future."

THE HEAVEN HERE.

A peaceful spot In a sunny land, A heart of cheer, And a helpful hand, The love that shines 'Twixt thee and me, And brings its peace To me and thee— Oh, tell your creeds Till the night draws near, But I am content, For my heaven's here.

It makes a man swear to— But what's the use? So many things make a man swear.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever if she doesn't talk too much.

Undoubtedly the reason why women talk so much is because they think it would be embarrassing to be caught out of practice.

Heroes are painfully made by a brave deed and easily unmade by a little silliness.

Keeping up appearances often taxes one's income, but keeping up disappearances taxes the resources of the sheriff.

Some men will do anything for money—except work.

There are people so stingy that they never flatter anybody but themselves.

Compliments, while seeming to be very innocent and simple, sometimes prove to be expensive things.

People who look large have often been known to feel small.

Don't expect too much of your fellow man. Our hearts may be all right, but some of us have an impediment in our brain.

It is a good thing to know how to quit and much better to prove it.

She looked ethereal—divinely fair Of form and feature, with a queenly grace

Of poise and manner and an elegance Of costume and of carriage which bespoke

Her station as the cultured flower of wealth

Born to the manor house with marble halls;

And, drawn by all her charm, with heart athrill.

I hastened near that I might hear her voice

And thus it was I heard her sweetly say:

"Oh, say that tightway guy gives me a pain;

Why, you can bet your life he's on the job

Whenever savin' money is the stunt; Of all the cheap chair warmers I have met

He is the worst that's hovered 'round my hut;

And such a bonehead, too—no dub like that

Can have much luck with me; I feed him quick

As soon as I got wise"—But here I fled—

Alas, alas, this is an age of slang

Generally.

"Anyway, we can safely say that his intentions are good."

"What are they good for?"

"Oh, a touch at least!"

Hateful Thing!

"Are you fond of men's society?" chirruped the chappie who had haunted the girl all summer like the ghost of an undesirable past.

"Really I don't know," murmured the girl.

"Don't know?"

"No; you see I have had no chance to try for a long time."

Smart Youth.

"If at first you don't succeed what should you do?"

"What, me?"

"Yes."

"If I don't succeed first time trying?"

"Yes."

"Make a kick to the management."

Artistic.

"He's an awful liar."
