THE SHEPHERD IS ON THE HILLS The shepherd is upon the hills, And with a song of gold That charmed his flocks of old;

He plays, upon the oaten pipes n simple garb of home spun weave, And brown locks blowing free, He guards the gates of dew and dawn And sings beside the sea,

And heard his golden lay. As on the sweet, archaic pipes He paused awhile to play: Or Orpheus to his dear-The song that made Diana swoon And Love lean down to hear.

I saw the vision pass

And o'er the cool, green grass; The oaten pipe, the listening flock, And vonder through the tree

And bondman to the task; And joy to live I ask;

Emerged Eurydice.

To dream of it and stay.

That figure on the hills,

The Naiads in the rills; The oaten pipe-and then, Nailed on the cross of men.
