DISLIKE GUARDIAN WHO TALKS OF DEATH
Woman Wants Another and More Optimistic Custodian For a Little Child.
CLEVELAND, Dec. 5. — Mrs. Henry E. Fiedler has asked Judge Hadden to remove Charles G. Smith as guardian for Anna Irene Smith, eight years old alleging that he predicted the early death of the child. She wants a custodian who takes a more cheerful view of life.
Smith, who is the father of Mrs. Fiedler's first husband, also a son of Smith, undertook the charge of the child, heir to a $15,000 estate on the death of her father. When the plaintiff married Henry E. Fiedler, No. 2946 East Seventy-third street, they adopted the girl.
Mrs. Fiedler now charges that Smith obtained guardianship by misrepresentation, and saying frequently that the little girl would die soon. Smith did, according to witnesses, but never as a prophecy, always as a fear. The child was in poor health and Smith believed she might follow her grandmother to the grave.
The grandmother, Mrs. Anna L. Smith, died February 4, 1907; the child's father followed three days after. Smith feared the girl might be taken off next.

CRIBES & MASON beg to announce that all those wishing Xmas photos from their studio must have them taken on or before Wednesday, December 9, as no sittings will be accepted after that date it being impossible to finish before Xmas any taken after that time.

A. E. Gagnon of the C. A. Smith Company of Minneapolis, is on Coos Bay. He is one of the ablest saw-mill experts of the world, and will make a study of Smith's great mill on Coos Bay, with a view to increase its output to its utmost capacity. Mr. Gagnon is foreman of the Smith mill at Minneapolis, which is the largest mill in the world and cuts one million feet every 24 hours. He says that the mill would cut one and a half million if they had large logs as they have on this coast.

BREAKS ALL BAD BOY HALF HOUR RECORDS.
NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Here is what one bad boy, 12-year-old George Schoenemann, did in one half hour recently in Brooklyn, while confined in a room above the children's court waiting for his case to be called.
Chased the other boys and threw them into a panic.
Kicked a cuspidor to pieces.
Drove a hole with his foot into the panel of the door.
Smashed an opening through a panel in the wall.
Pulled a hot hinge pin from the stove, shoved it through the peep hole of the door and almost put out Policeman Brill's eye.
Tried to choke himself to death.
Severely burned his own hands and those of Policeman Ansbro in a struggle for the possession of the hot hinge pin.
When the boy was led before Judge Wilkin he danced in rage and set up a howl that was heard a block away as he was sentenced to the house of refuge. Schoenemann had been arrested on the complaint of his mother, a hard working widow of 263 Cooper street, who complained that he was incorrigible, though he had already served two terms at the disciplinary training school. He had ordered many things for himself at stores, she said, and had had them charged to her.
When two policemen went to the Schoenemann home for George he made a flying leap at them from half way up the stairs and fought like fury to break through the door.

CULLINGS OF COQUILLE.
News of Interest There As Told By The Sentinel.
