The policy of the Coos Bay Times will be Republican in politics, with the independence of which President Roosevelt is the leading exponent.

WHAT WEALTH BRINGS.

His efforts to disseminate a part of it during the last few years have led most people to believe that the wealth of Andrew Carnegie oppresses him. In an interview of some years ago he stated that he could never experience genuine happiness until he had rid himself of the superfluous dollars he had accumulated.

Mr. Carnegie indulges in a few characteristic reflections on the subject of money getting and money hoarding which, coming from one of the most successful captains of industry the world has known, ought to be accepted at face value. Most of his observations are saved from triteness by the fact that it is he who gives them utterance.

Mr. Carnegie has discovered nothing that other millionaires have not learned before him since the time there have been individual fortunes. Vast accumulation of wealth is only a source of worry and disappointment to the possessor.

BACK IN VERMONT.

The reform wave is sweeping even little Vermont from its moorings. The legislature which is in session is wrought up over primary election bills. From Montpelier comes this word:

"The demand for reform continues, and the best way to effect it, in the opinion of many, is to enact a primary election law. This does not suit the politicians, and the matter is not well understood by the average legislator, so there is a great deal of missionary work to be done if the bill is to be passed.

It is to be regretted that primary election reform is not yet understood in Vermont. A great deal has been said about the backwardness of the Art.

The hen remarked to the muley cow As she cackled her daily lay. (That is, the hen cackled) "It's funny how I'm good for an egg a day. I'm a fool to do it for what do I get? My food and my lodging. My! But the poodle gets that—he's the house hold pet, And he never laid a single egg yet—Not even when eggs are high."

The muley cow remarked to the hen, As she masticated her cud, (That is, the cow did) "Well, what then? You quit, and your name is mud. I'm good for eight gallons of milk each day. And I'm given my stable and grub; But the parrot gets that much, anyway— All she can gobble—and what does she pay? Not a dribble of milk, the dub!"

But the hired man remarked to the pair, "You get all that's comin' to you. The poodle does tricks, an' the parrot kin swear. Which is better th'n you kin do. You're necessary, but what's the use o' bewailin' your daily part? You're bourgeois—workin' your ownly excuse; You can't do nothin' but just produce— What them fellers does is Art!" —Exchange.

Perverved Proverbs.

In onion there is strength. Sweats are the juices of adversity. Cosmetics cover a multitude of skins. A soft director turneth away graft. Hell hath no fury like a woman's corn. A wise boss maketh a glad party. A fat rebate is rather to be chosen than straight profits. A woman is known by the cooks she cannot keep. Fools invest where angels fear to swim.

Some theologians have abolished hell, and one canto of the "Inferno" is now declared spurious, but there is still trouble enough left in this world.

The average woman can change her mind in half the time it takes a man to change his collar.

Calling a man a four-flusher is far easier than making up your mind to call a man when you think he's four-flushing.

A stout, overdressed woman sat talking to a friend. She said: "Yes, since John came into his money we have a nice country house, horses, cows, pigs, hens, and—" "That must be charming," broke in the other. "You can have all the fresh eggs you want, and—" "Oh, well," hastily interrupted the first speaker, "of course, the hens can lay if they want to, but in our position it isn't at all necessary."

Two Good Policies

to have is one upon your Life and the other upon your Property. You are then protected in a double sense, and your family is also protected in case anything should happen to you, or the house burn down by accident. The cost of either Fire or Life Insurance is infinitesimal in comparison with its great blessings and the actual, substantial protection it affords to both you and your posterity.
