With the Toast and Tea

GOOD EVENING.

Let us be content to work, to do the thing we can, and not presume to fret because it's little.

FIT PUNISHMENTS.

If I had my way with the trusts, Oh, fitting the fates they'd meet. The crockery trust I'd send to smash And the egg trust I would beat.

I would make the watch trust go. To the flour trust give the sack; I'd wipe the towel trust out, and put The book trust on the rack.

I would soak the sponge trust good. Send the rocket trust sky high. The umbrella trust shut up, and punch The needle trust in the eye.

The coal trust I would fire. I would freeze the ice trust out; The stone trust I would crush to bits And the milk trust put to route.

I would lick the label trust. The whiskey trust put down; And the auto trust, with one honk-like yell I would drive clean out of town.

An old maid never has to sit up to let in a man who can't find the keyhole.

Every man who takes your measure does not make you a suit of clothes.

In Los Angeles the recall looks so terrible that it frightens people out of office.

It is better to be a man of one idea than to be a man with a lot of them that won't work.

The man who buys his friends is always troubled by the suspicion that he paid too much.

The fellow of whom everybody speaks well never gets very far in this world. It's the fighter who wins.

One of the funniest things about a girl is how sweet she can look in the evening and how uncanny in the morning!

"Be happy if you have only cent," says one scribbler. Sure! And be five times as happy if you have five cents!

The stuff in a man is always shown when the last boat comes up to the sinking ship and a fat lady is first on the ladder.

The man who has confidence in a scheme and loses it is still better off than the man who had his money in it and lost that!

Putting your best foot forward is not as important as putting both of them in the path that every honest man should tread.

Why do we say, "As square as a dollar?" A dollar isn't square at all; it is round—and not very much (a) round at that!

The legislature of Kansas is thinking of making "affinities" illegal in that state. Other states content themselves with making them uncomfortable.

A Coos Bay man who knows says that a man who can rock the cradle with one hand and button his wife's waist with the other is a great matrimonial success.

James J. Hill has given it as his opinion that there is plenty of money in the country, so you might as well look around for something else to kick about.

Denver is anxious to add 25,000 to her population during the present year. Doctors who need the money will be glad to see the increase come in the natural way.

According to the official tax figures, New York has only ten millionaires. It is just such things that shatter one's faith in the old saying that figures never lie.

Parties at which the guests answer the question: "Why I got married?" are much in vogue. It is always so interesting to hear the married people try to find some excuse.

A 70-year-old man who is about to marry his boyhood sweetheart asserts that he has never kissed a woman. Oh, well; there's that old saying that "It's never too late to mend."

An exchange reports that the effort to induce people to attend church in northern California by means of concerts has failed. Still, the people of that section should not despair until they have tried one or two wrestling matches.

"Did you telegraph your father?"
"Yes, and got his answer."
"What is it?"
"I asked him if he would forgive us if we came back and he said the only condition on which he would forgive us would be that we shouldn't come back."

A certain Coos Bay young man, who is a familiar figure at the Millicoma Club was calling on one of Marshfield's pretty girls Sunday evening and during a pause in the conversation remarked:

"I've come to a conclusion. 'What is it?' the pretty girl asked.

"I realized today that I have been a bachelor for thirty-eight years, and

Her—O, Will, this is so sudden!
Him—And I decided that I'd had a bully time and I'll keep it up.

"Oh, let the women vote; let them do all the voting they like. They've got the time to do it and may sometimes save the men the bother of it. Besides, if we don't like their laws we won't have to obey them, and what are they going to do about it?"

"This is the way the Philosopher of the Millicoma spoke the other evening when Dr. Dix remarked after reading the society page of The Times that he noticed Mrs. Mackay had declared for woman suffrage. Just then John Goss struck an attitude and addressing Harry Skinner as if he were a suffragette convention spoke as follows:

"Yes, dear sisters, when you have the ballot and have sent your legally elected feminine representatives to the Legislature and they have passed a law declaring that no man shall smoke a pipe of ancient lineage, what are you going to do if these offenders go right on offending?"

To be sure, personally speaking, we don't like the antique pipe any more than you do, but we are not going to vote to take it away from its owner; we have a fellow-feeling even for the erring brother who smokes cigarettes, and we shall stand firmly by his right to smoke them; yea, we shall give him the right hand of fellowship on that point, and hold our nose with the left.

We believe in the square deal, with malice toward none and charity for all.

We plead a weakness for certain pungent foreign cheeses which many people dislike, but if we may be suffered to gratify our liking in that direction without legislative interference, are we not going to be equally tolerant with our fellow-citizen who enjoys the fumaceous cigarette?

We go farther: If our brother desires to regale himself with stimulants, that is his privilege, unless in his indulgence he interferes with our comfort and deprives us of our rights and privileges. Then we believe in such punitive measures for him as the offense justifies.

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as each chooses to see it in his own good way, if he doesn't jeopard our life, curtail our liberty or impede our pursuit of happiness is our platform of principles. Therefore, let the woman vote; for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is also their just due; but let there be a thorough understanding of the individual freedom meant by "liberty and the pursuit of happiness."
