TO REFOREST BURNED AREA

GOVERNMENT FORESTERS' INVESTIGATING FEASIBILITY OF UTILIZING LARGE TRACTS OF BARREN LAND.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25.—An investigation as to the practicability of reforesting the great areas of forest lands which have been devastated by fire and which are now lying barren and unproductive is now being carried on by the United States Forest Service in the Olympic National forest in Washington. The area selected for the experiments comprises several thousand acres on the Saleduck river, and was at one time covered with a magnificent forest of Douglas fir. It was first burned over in 1890 and again in 1895. A third fire over almost the same area occurred in 1906, destroying the last remnant of the original forest, leaving the entire area treeless.

In some regions a second growth of trees will come in naturally after a burn, in the course of a few years time, and where this happens artificial means of securing reproduction is not necessary. There are, however, other burns, where new growth does not come in readily, due to adverse climatic conditions, absence of seed trees, or perhaps to the impoverishment of the soil by repeated fires. Those areas are often of very large extent and in such cases some means, such as planting trees or sowing seed, is necessary to restore the forest. The burn in the Olympic forest is of this nature and the Forest Service is planning to conduct a series of experiments to determine the proper methods of reforesting the area. Douglas fir will be the species used.

It is believed that on the greater part of the area simply scattering the seed over the ground in the fall before the snow falls or in the early spring will be sufficient to start a new growth. On other portions of the area, however, where a growth of grass and weeds has covered the ground, it will probably be necessary to work the seed into the soil by raking or dragging brush over the ground. In some localities sowing with soil will probably be successful. To test these various methods five experimental plots have been selected. These represent the various conditions found on the burn, such as difference in slope, altitude, exposure, and vegetation.

This fall a large quantity of Douglas fir seed will be collected and a quantity sown on each plot. Next spring the experiments will be repeated and it is expected that the results obtained will indicate what methods and what seasons of the year are best adapted to the conditions found on this burn. When this is accomplished the Forest Service will be in a position to commence the reforestation of the Saleduck burn on a large scale and to reseed large areas each year.

It is believed also that the results obtained will be of value not only in solving the problem of restocking the burn in the Olympic national forest, but that much will be learned concerning the best methods of reforesting denuded areas on other forests throughout the Pacific northwest, where conditions are similar, and that thus the work may be largely extended.

BUILD GIANTS OF HIGH SEAS

TITANIC AND THE OLYMPIC WILL BE LARGEST STEAMSHIPS IN THE WORLD—ARE UNDER CONSTRUCTION AT BELFAST.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Although what will be the largest two steamships in the world, the Titanic and the Olympic of the White Star Line, are mere skeletons just now in their million-dollar double gantry at Belfast, Ireland, the marine architects know exactly how they are going to look when they start on their maiden passage to this port. From the plans and specifications the designers have made a wash drawing showing how the monsters will look when in the water and ready to sail. Although at first glance the illustration suggests the Mauretania and Lusitania, with their four gigantic funnels, there is something in the appearance of the new leviathans that is typical of a White Star steamship.

The great height of the new liners and the broad sweep of the bridge gives some idea of their 60,000 tons displacement. The builders have almost eliminated the old custom of carrying masts, and in this respect the largest ships in the world resemble the Old Dominion steamers, the smallest passenger-carrying vessels in American coastwise service. All the Old Dominion liners have only one mast, that being the foremast. It is so with the Olympic and Titanic.

These two vessels are being built simultaneously side by side in a steel gantry that was begun a year before the keels were laid, and which cost over a million dollars. The new liners will each be 360 feet long, with a 92-foot beam. The unusual beam is equivalent to the length of some of the fast steam yachts of this port. The Olympic and Titanic will be ready for the New York, Southampton and Cherbourg service of the White Star line in 1911. The builders are Harland & Wolff.

Over 19,000 employees of the United States Steel Corporation, subscribe for stock in that concern.
