TRIPLETS ARE BORN
AND FATHER FAINTS

NEW YORK, July 17. — Triplets were born in New York Sunday, but they brought no rejoicing to the humble little home to which the stork carried them. They came to a family which already numbered seven, and the only means whereby the 10 mouths are fed is the meager wage of $10 a week earned by the father.

Mrs. Rachel Platt is the mother of the three mites. Her husband has charge of a laundry delivery station, and in two stuffy, poorly furnished rooms he struggles to keep his family together.

When the father was first informed that there were two new babies in his home he rushed into the street in a hysterical condition, and it took half an hour to calm him. When he reentered the room and was told he was not only doubly, but trebly, a father, he collapsed in a faint.

Senator Depew says that a man can obtain a very liberal education if he will read the best books while his wife is getting ready to accompany him—News item.

Pa's versed in Greek and Latin.
He can speak in German, too;
He knows some Esperanto.
And is up in "parley-vo."
Though he never went to college,
He is wise in spite of that,
For he studied Greek while mother
Was putting on her hat.

Though he never heard a lecture,
The philosophers he knows;
All the "ologies" he's mastered
And there's nothing, I suppose,
In the sciences he hasn't
Read about, while sitting there
Waiting patiently for mother
To adjust her wealth of hair.

He's familiar with the poets,
All the sages he can quote,
He is up on Aristotle.
He has read all Darwin wrote,
He is apt in mathematics
And he learned it all, I guess,
Waiting patiently while mother
Went upstairs to change her dress.

About the only exercise some Coos Bay men get is kicking.

Only the narrow mind insists on molding all other minds to its own pattern.

It doesn't seem to matter much what you buy, just so you get it at a bargain.

Bad judgment is always spoken of as bad luck by the person who exercises it.

One usually excuses a quarrel by saying that the other person is hard to get along with.

Tracing the family tree is nothing to tracing the neighbor who last borrowed the ladder.

Some persons treat friend and foe the same, but even so their friends deserve much sympathy.

Girls, beware! A lot of the young boys who pose as candy kids develop later in life into lemon drops.

The men who invest too much in booze bills never seem to have any money to waste in paying grocery bills.

Marshfield is not bragging about her baseball teams this year—at least, not in a very loud tone of voice.

A lazy person gets more praise when he does a little work than ten persons usually get who work all the time.

The trouble is not that life doesn't afford enough pleasure, but merely that people don't know how to choose them.

An observing Oregon bachelor writes to The Times to say that women and newspapers should never be judged by their wrappers.

"It pays to read the Bible. A Milwaukee man found $4,867 in his." Perhaps some refrain, fearing their hearts are too weak to stand shocks like this.

Minister Wu Ting-fang, who says Americans work too hard at their play, must have taken particular notice of some fellow on the coaching lines at a baseball game.

Miss Buzzard of Cincinnati, aged 20, changed her name last week by marrying a young man named Bird. We could say more, but will allow the thoughts to take wings.

The child of the small family, reared in a sensible manner, is worth more to civilization than one reared in such a swarm the parents couldn't find time to administer to each its rightful spankings.

A contemporary is disposed to complain because Dr. Elliot's list of best books contains not one single Indiana product. And Senator Beveridge could mention a couple that he himself has written.

"My boy, remember a wife is a good deal like an automobile."

"How so, dad?"

"Because getting one isn't so terribly difficult but the cost of maintenance is something frightful."

Fulton county, Georgia, has a machine with which convicts are whipped when they disobey their keepers. The job probably looks too much like hard work for the keepers to tackle it in person.

"There are getting to be so many automobiles in Peoria that when a little Peoria girl went out in the country last Sunday she sniffed a few times and exclaimed: 'How funny the air smells.'"—Peoria Herald-Transcript.

But why blame the automobiles when distilleries are also numerous in Peoria and skunks are plentiful in the country?

"If I should die, and at my death some friend should come and stand above me—should whisper with his sobbing breath how very much he's come to love me—if he should weep and wring his hands and wail that I had acted fairly—should say that ever from the stands he's boosted me for doing square; if he should say that I was right in giving out some close decision against the home team in a fight where he had never cursed my vision; if he should whisper in his grief, 'Old boy, I know that you were straight—I never called you a lop-eared thief nor swore you were a pirate's mate; I never clamored for a rope when your decisions looked quite sickly; nor have I yet expressed the hope you'd go where snowballs vanish quickly; I cheered each time you acted well, as though you were a human being—nor dally gave you merry hell for accidents beyond my seeing; I always thought you did your rest, and so no side advice I proffered—I think you fairly met the test whenever the occasion offered.' If these were but the words he said, I'd rise up in my white cravat—it were not enough to wake the dead to get a sudden shock like that—I'd rise up in my coat of white and look around a bit, and then, if I found that I'd heard aright, I'd drop back dead again."

HEIRESS TO WED MAN WHO SAVED HER LIFE

Romance For a Girl Rescued From Death Under the Feet of Stampeding Cattle.

CHICAGO, July 17. — With the announcement that Miss Mary M. Crain, an heiress of Fond du Lac, Wis., will be married to Henry F. Sheridan, a city building inspector, is made public a pretty little romance beginning when Mr. Sheridan saved Miss Crain from a cattle stampede at the stock yards two years ago.

Miss Crain is the daughter of Mark Crain, a banker of Eldorado, Wis., and after his death a few years ago she went to live with a wealthy uncle, Thomas Kelly, at Fond du Lac. With her uncle and other relatives she came to Chicago in August, 1907, for a visit. As the party was making the rounds of the yards, Miss Crain became separated from the others for a few moments. She was standing in the middle of a street when a herd of cattle which had broken out of a pen came dashing madly down the narrow thoroughfare.

Apparently paralyzed with fear, Miss Crain was unable to move and her death seemed certain. As the maddened animals were almost upon her, Sheridan who was at the stock yards on business, rushed into the street, grasped Miss Crain about the waist and carried her to safety.
