The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

NOVEL INITIATION IS HELD AT SPOKANE

Frank B. Tichenor, general organizer of the Woodmen of the World, and who is well-known on Coos Bay yesterday pulled off one of the most novel initiations that a fraternal society has held in the country. It was a monster initiation by the W. O. W. lodges of Spokane, a class of over 300 taking the degrees. The initiation was pulled off in street-cars, forty-one being required to accommodate the candidates and members present. The above cut is an advance picture of how Mr. Tichenor expected it to look. Mr. Tichenor will be here within a few weeks to aid in the final preparations for the monster log rolling and carnival which will be pulled off on Coos Bay the first week in October when the W. O. W. expects to initiate a class of about 300.

BY-PRODUCTS OF DOUGLAS FIR

EXHIBIT OF DISTILLATION PRODUCTS FROM OREGON TIMBER IS VALUABLE OBJECT LESSON OF WHAT MAY BE DONE.

MISSOULA, Mont., July 31. — Acting in accordance with a request from the Secretary of the Missoula Chamber of Commerce, the District Office of the Forest Service, is collecting an exhibit for the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The collection now ready comprises paper pulps manufactured from the various woods of this region, turpentine and many other products distilled from Douglas fir, and samples of wood which have been given a preservative treatment with creosote to make them resist decay. These products will be installed very soon. To this exhibit will later be added other specimens, making a complete display of each of the species found in Montana and of their products. Sections of the tree trunks, specimens of the twigs and flowers, and samples of the lumber manufactured from each species will be shown. Wood which has been subjected to strength tests and photographs showing the methods used will be displayed. Other photographs and enlargements will illustrate the important phases of forestry work on the National Forests.

The collection of paper pulps comprises samples made from each of the important woods of the northern Rockies and shows the wood fiber in both the unbleached and bleached state, with a statement of the amount of chemical required to bleach the fiber. These specimens, which were prepared in the Forest Service wood chemistry laboratory in Washington, show that from many of the Rocky Mountain species, paper can be made of as good quality and as cheap as that obtained from the eastern spruce, while the abundant water power in this region offers unexcelled advantages for its manufacture.

Another valuable object lesson is the collection of Douglas fir distillation products presented to the Forest Service by a wood distilling company of Oregon. These products include turpentine, rosin, tar, pitch, wood creosote, charcoal and various oils, as well as fruit sprays, disinfectants, shingle stains and other useful materials which are made from the oils. All of these come from the pitchy wood of the common red or Douglas fir, which is plentiful throughout the Rocky Mountains and is the great timber tree of the Pacific Northwest. These products suggest great possibilities for the utilization of waste wood, as they can be obtained from pine as well as from fir.

The sections of creosoted ties and timbers which were treated with preservatives in Forest Service treating plants, illustrate the thoroughness of the methods which the service is now using in its demonstration work, while teaching wood users the best way to treat timber so as to double its life. The District Office will supervise the construction and experimental operation of several wood preserving plants for private firms during the coming summer, in order that the use of treated ties, poles, posts and mine timbers may come into more common use and their value be better understood.

The species display will attempt to give an accurate idea of each kind of wood that grows in the region. The twigs and cones, the bark, and the polished section of the tree trunk will help people to compare and identify trees they do not know, and the samples of lumber will show the usefulness and beauty of each variety for finishing purposes. The samples of the tested woods and the photographs showing testing machines and methods of operation will illustrate the work which is being done in the government timber testing laboratories.

The series of enlarged photographs illustrating the varied work of the Forest Service, will be a particularly interesting feature of the display. Among the subjects pictured will be rangers fighting fires, or building roads and trails; logging and burning slashings on the Mis-soula and other National Forests; building forest nurseries, raising young trees, and reforesting naked lands; surveying and mapping of the forests; the grazing of stock on the National Forests and reasons why it should be regulated; and the results to be obtained by good forest management. Many of the photographs which are to form this part of the exhibit have not yet been taken, but they will be collected during the coming summer so that the display will be complete early next winter.
