You Auto See Our "Auto"

It is to be seen in our window and you will admit it is one of the scenes of Coos Bay.

THIS AUTO

Is made entirely of articles from our Hardware stock and illustrates the great diversity and extent of the goods we carry.

After you have seen our window scene come in and see our window screens and also one of the largest and best stocked Hardware stores on Coos Bay. Everything from a carpet tack to a logger's spike and from a pocket stove to a steel range. Every thing from a tin cup to a complete kitchen outfit. We might fill this whole page with a catalogue of the things we carry, but that wouldn't be fair to the other fellows.

Come and see us and we will open a keg of nails—real nails, mind you, for we believe in painting the town and we have the brushes and can paint with the best paint that a painter ever painted with. House paint, floor paint, stains, varnishes. Come in and see.

PIGEONS INHERIT MOTHER'S STUB LEG

Billie, a Pet, Which Was Injured, Hatches Young, Which Are Also Cripples.

SALEM, Ind., Aug. 19.—John Frow of Salem, civil engineer of Washington county, reports an unusual freak of nature in his pigeon roost. Last year a young pigeon was presented to his six-year-old son. It was named Billie, and soon became the favorite pet of the pigeon. Billie came home one day with a broken leg and the leg had to be amputated. Billie soon rallied from the shock. By the use of his wings he managed to go about the premises.

Billie proved, however, to be a female, and laid the usual two eggs early this year. Each of the two little pigeons hatched out of these eggs has only one leg and a stub like the mother bird Billie.

FORGOTTEN.

Written for The Times by H. C. GALE, North Bend, Ore.

There is a land 'neath the sweltering sun
Where grows no tree or flower;
No river quenches its mighty thirst,
Sand and sage brush are its dower;
Bare rocks haunt their naked shapes
Against an unkind sky
From where the sun relentless shines
And scarce a cloud floats by.
Repelled by all this arid waste
No man comes to cast his lot—
In this of all the world despised—
"This lonely country God forgot."

II

There's another land of richest soil
To which God gave rich gifts—
The mighty forests, the verdant fields,
The splendid harbor for many ships.
He loved it well, in a kindly mood
He shaped the mountains rare,
With many flowers he decked the wood
That waft their fragrance on the sea blown air.
All that man may plant in the soil
Will in abundance grow.
The climate is perfect in summer 'tis cool
In the winter there's no frost or snow
Here man has built some mighty mills
And many towns have grown,
Clustering around the shores of Coos Bay
But, alas! they are alone,
For far from the noise and bustle
Of any rail road train
Is Coos Bay country neglected—
Thus for many years has lain—
Just get on the old stage coach
And come here on the trot
To see the land our God remembered
But which great HARRIMAN forgot.
