Official Paper of Coos County.

A PROPHECY THAT WENT WRONG

AN ASSERTIVE observer of ten years ago declared that women were ceasing to be the comrades of men and the sharers of his responsibilities and work. He predicted that the woman of the future would be merely a sort of toy, a luxury, an ornament of the home, but of no particular utility in making the home comfortable and desirable.

The more daring a prophet the more credence, apparently, is given to his forecasts. The books of this particular cynic obtained a wide vogue and his comments were discussed at length. But fate has a trick of ignoring the conclusions of savants. She goes ahead and arranges matters to suit herself without consulting the works of her human advisers and volunteer directors.

There is nothing to indicate that women are any less the comrades of men, or will ever be the less. Rather are there signs that the toy type of womanhood is going out of fashion. There is more participation on the part of women in the work of the world than there was ten years ago, than there ever was in the career of mankind, so far as history informs us. At a meeting of universal suffragists in New York recently, a lecturer stated that:

The plumbing trade is followed by 126 women in the United States. The dental profession is graced by 786 others. More than 1,000 are architects and builders. More than 3,300 are in the pulpit. The law profession is followed by 1,010. Five hundred and forty-five are carpenters. Eighty-four are stationary engineers. One hundred and sixty-seven are masons. One hundred and ninety-three do blacksmithing for a livelihood. More than 1,300 work in mines. Undertaking is performed by 323 women.

If this is not sharing in the world's work, what is it? Is there anything in these statistics which point to women becoming mere ornaments?

AS TO COAL.

IN VIEW OF the controversy now on regarding the conservation of natural resources some figures just published by the geological survey are very interesting. They refer to the production of coal in this country and the table shows a marked decrease in the amount of coal mined in 1908 over that taken out in 1907.

For 1907 a total of 394 million tons of bituminous coal was mined in the United States and 85 million tons of anthracite, making a total of 480 million tons. In 1908 the production of bituminous coal amounted to but 332 million tons or a decrease of 62 million tons. The production of anthracite coal also showed a two-million-ton decrease. In practically every coal producing state of the union less coal was mined in 1908 than in 1907. In the state of Wyoming where much of the coal consumed in the northwest comes from the production for 1908 was less than that for 1907 by 763,088 tons.

GOOD EVENING.

Next best to natural, spontaneous cheeriness, is deliberate, intended and persistent cheeriness, which we can create, can cultivate and can so foster and cherish that after a few years of the world will never suspect that it was not an hereditary gift. —Selected.

The Little Boy's Nightmare.

I had an awful dream last night; I dreamt th' schoolhouse bell Come runnin' after me an' give a awful fiendish yell, An' that it chased me through the town an' out acrost th' creek, An' then it stopped an' yelled at me: "You think you're mighty slick! But I'll be comin' after you another day 'fore long, An' when I do I think that you will sing another song."

I dreamt the schoolhouse glared at me; its windows looked like eyes An' that the big doors was a mouth of most tremendous size, An' that it rolled its window eyes an' gnashed its big door teeth An' shook its front-stair chin that swung and wobbled underneath An' growled: "All right for you, my boy. But you can't get away, I'll have you back inside o' me first thing you know some day."

An' all the words in all the world jumped out of all the books An' come a-runnin' after me with most bloodthirsty looks— All of them had their letters wrong, which made 'em look real queer, Th' big five-syllabul ones, too, was scattered far an' near. An' all of them kept chattering' as long as I's in sight: "You got to come back to the school an' learn to spell us right."

An' then a lot of 2-and-2's come from th' schoolhouse door An' kept a-singin' all th' time about how they made four, An' Long Division hobbled up an' made a face at me, An' some one kept a-cryin': "Can't you find that G. C. D.?" Th' joggerphy jumped up at me and scared me half to death. By tellin' me to bound the lands an' never stop for breath.

So I woke up an' pinched myself to see if I was here, But all to-day I've gone around an' felt extremely queer. I walked a-past th' schoolhouse an' it looked about th' same, But something somewhere muttered, an' I thought it called my name. Aw, what's th' good of having any old vacation? Say! It spoils it all to know you've got to go to school some day. —Selected.

The man who falls into a large sum of money has the drop on the most of us.

Everything comes to those who wait, but when a man wants trouble he rushes out to look for it.

We presume every man, during his first flight in an airship, will wish his father could see him now.

That New York dentist who got $10,000 for pulling two teeth must have had a firm grip on somebody's leg.

The aeroplane hat is reported to be on the way from Paris. It will make the money fly when it gets here, we suppose.

John W. Gates, who says there is nothing but prosperity ahead, is of course, predicting chiefly for John W. Gates.

For the sake of the country, let us hope that Evelyn Thaw will get over the notion that she would like to raise a family.

It has been our observation that no man is so superstitious that he will hesitate to collect a bill on a Friday the 13th.

The Pennsylvania widow who is to be married again at the age of 81 years is probably trying to set a good example for younger women who are almost discouraged enough to quit the game.

"The man who could run a newspaper to suit everybody went to heaven long ago."—Exchange. And the other fellows are being consigned to an entirely different region, we suppose.

A Kansas lover wrote to his sweetheart: "I would rather listen to you chewing your gum than hear Caruso sing." After marriage he may prefer to hear her chewing the rag than listen to the village orchestra. Who knows?

If you have quit smoking don't bury the fact in silence. Get up meetings, become a reformer and hold conventions about it. In this way you can win money and fame, and your wife can get to board the delegates, the same as they do in Portland.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reliable physicians, as the danger they will do is ten fold as the good you can possibly derive from them.
