SOMEWHERE.

Somewhere today is falling
The mantle of the snow;
Somewhere the gray clouds lower
And the winds of winter blow.

Somewhere the frost, with fingers
Of icy grasp, take hold Of rippling brooks and rivers
And grip them hard and cold.

Somewhere the shouts of skaters,
In many a merry peal,
Keep time in rhythmic measure
To ringing, flashing steel.

Somewhere the sleigh bells, jingling Above the crackling snow,
Are telling of the pleasures
That winter reveals know.

Somewhere the piling of snowdrifts Sweep over road and field,
And under cold, white silence
The brown earth lies concealed.

Somewhere the King of Winter
Has set his silvery crown,
But say, you lucky Coos Bayites, It's nowhere near this town.

Is it?
Every person should be his own fool killer.

When the fool and his money are divorced there is no alimony.

It is only our own grist that comes back to us through the mills of life.

Marriage sometimes proves that two can live quite as expensively as one.

If the Israelites had ever heard the modern gossip when she is busy, they would have considered the task of making bricks without straw a mere nothing.

Paste diamonds don't cut much glass.

A sympathetic manner is the grafter's greatest asset.

The real mark of genius is the habit of thoroughness.

Honesty is not only the best policy but also the best insurance.

Too many rely upon eloquence to cover deficiencies in logic.

Most every person presents a wide field of undeveloped possibilities.

Some very real talent is much belittled by an insatiable appetite for flattery.

If you would have your theories successful, begin by making them popular.

"Most people who live on Easy street moved over there from Industry avenue."

A girl isn't really grown up until she begins to worry about her complexion.

There are grafts and grafts, but a really good grafter can get rich on any of them.

It requires quite some practice to write letters that say a great deal and mean next to nothing.

In your own case it is mere thoughtlessness, but in the other fellow's it is a lack of consideration.

The llama blimps its name Like one that knows no fetters.
If we should do the same,
We'd waste a lot of letters.

Your stomach has more nerve than you have. Impose on your stomach, and it will protest promptly, whereas you stand all sorts of indignities without saying a word.

The man who continually harbors kind thoughts is liable to do kind things, and if you watch long enough you are liable to catch him at it.

Every one refuses to confess even to himself a curiosity concerning what the undertaker does when he sends every one out of the room.

Full of zeal, the country convert in his first prayer meeting remarks offered himself for service. "I am ready to do anything the Lord asks of me," said he, "so long as it's honorable."

The most charitable woman in the world and the most optimistic concerning the outcome of all that looks dark and troubled now, can never believe the boy next door will ever be president.

If you must have something to worry about, quit fretting about the weather, or the railway, and other petty things; and remember what will happen to you when you are about 70 years old.

THE LORD OF CREATION.

I'm glad I'm not a woman, with all that hair to comb, and styles to fritter over in public and at home.
I've wrestled with employees till the office floor has shook; but I'm glad I'm not a housewife a-managing the cook. A man goes to the ball game; a woman is delayed by dressing—she is lucky if she sees three innings played. In politics or business ofttimes a man's the boat; but his wife's a slave to fashion, and cannot even vote. . . . Yet if I were a woman, and had a loving spouse, I think I would allow him to smoke inside the house.—Arthur F. Riddle.

SALTED SAMOLEONS.

Come, let us strain both brawn
and brain, to pile up mighty heaps of plunder; O let us toil, and grind, and moli, and let amusement go to thunder! In divers climes we'll nail the dimes, by methods white or methods yellow; we'll keep up steam, and plan and scheme, and sometimes soak the other fellow. We have no time for song or rhyme, or plays or other things diverting; the eager lust for dough and dust is gripping us until it's hurting. We have no heart for works of art, for statues sculpted by grand old masters; our green back dreams and get there schemes stick tighter than adhesive plasters. We can't afford to leave our board for half a day, to go a-fishing; to grab the plunk and kindred junk—that is the burden of our wishing. And thus we strive while we're alive, and jog along upon our joyless journey; and when we croak—this is the joke—our wad is swiped by some attorney!

WALT MASON.

Profit and Loss.

"I used to walk the floor worrying about how I was going to pay my landlord," said Mr. Tuffuck.
"I hope you have quit all that,"
replied the optimist.
"I had to. The landlord said that if I didn't stop wearing out the floor he'd raise the rent."—Washington Star.

You are hoping, hoping, hoping—
So am I;
We may both go blindly groping
Till we die;
Though we ceaselessly must strive,
Though we never quite "arrive,"
We are keeping hope alive,
Wet or dry.

You are trying, trying, trying,
Day by day,
To clear every cause for sighing
From your way;
I am trying daily, too,
Trying to possess what few Though their best they bravely do, Ever may.

You are dreaming, dreaming dreaming—
So am I;

We may both go vainly scheming
Till we die;
We may never reach the shore
That is strewn with precious ore;
But if men might hope no more
Who would try?
