BIDDING FOR TRADE DEVELOPMENT.

WITH THE IMPROVEMENT of transportation facilities during the past decade the Pacific Coast is no longer regarded as the "jumping off place," and Oregon is at last coming into its own in the business world. The metropolis of the Pacific Coast is to-day the City of Opportunity and under the new business dispensation it is bidding for trade development and using modern methods that are bound to bring good results.

A writer in Everybody's Magazine in discussing this phase of commercial life points out some phases of latter day competition between cities as wide apart geographically as San Francisco and New Orleans. He says two ports, and these two destined to be, if not the greatest, at least among the greatest, in America, have already gone far toward the German ideal of public docks—toward throwing down the bars that close the gateway. They are San Francisco and New Orleans—the port of the south Pacific and the port of the Mississippi Valley—the two cities most vitally interested in the opening of Panama. California, the very State which we expect to find most railroad ridden, is the freest of all. In all her ports she owns the tidelands, and in San Francisco the entire harbor shore line, piers and all. Two piers she has leased to the Pacific Mail, but, besides that and two small industrial piers, every landing on her shore belongs to, and is operated by, the State authorities, and the low and uniform charges are fixed by the State. Back of the wharves, and serving them well, is a belt railway, and this, too, is owned by the State and serves everybody at the same flat price of $2 a car.

Recently California has been studying her port conditions. She believes that in twenty years San Francisco will have a business of thirty million tons, and that to take care of it she must begin now. Nothing less durable than concrete piers will do for her. She is discarding piling. Warehouses ample for their purpose, wide piers equipped with such cranes as Hamburg has—this is the outfit her legislature is asked to buy. No isolated piers, but a complete harbor designed for an increasing traffic, and a harbor in which any ship from any port may find a berth, and any cargo may find a landing place. Built, owned and operated by the public, with charges low and uniform, it will be the strongest bid California could put forward for the development of her trade.

GOOD EVENING.

How true it is that what we really see day by day depends less on the objects and scenes before our eyes than on the eyes themselves and the minds and hearts that use them. — F. D. Huntington.

A SONG OF A SUMMER.

Day dawn on the bright Pacific,
Soul dawn in your lifted eyes—
And you pink-tipped
As the waves pink-tipped
In the glow of the rosy skies
On the beach the white surf breaking,
O'er the dunes the glowing morn,
Through amber curtains waking
To the joy of a summer born.

Noonday on the glad Pacific,
Noon love in my throbbing breast—
And your brow aflush,
And your cheek ablush
From the thrill of a love confessed.
Bright lights from the waters glancing,
White gulls in the air a wheel,
And the crisping wavelets dancing
Down a floor of polished steel.

Twilight on the sad Pacific,
In my heart a vague distress,
At a love disdained
As the summer waned.
At a love grown less and less.
Gray clouds o'er the ocean banking,
Gray drift on the leaden shore,
And a chain on an old wreck clanking
Through the breakers' sullen roar.

Black night on the hushed Pacific,
Black night in my sodden breast,
While I grope in vain
Through the wind and rain,
With the ghost of a joy obsessed.
Dark squalls from the windward slanting,
While a gibbous moon and red
Looks down on the breakers, chanting
Requiem for a summer dead.

—Pacific Monthly.

Revised version: Poets are born, and not hatched, as you might sometimes infer from their cackle.

A dog can run as well on three legs as four, which is about all the credit we are willing to give a dog.

When a child dies the father doesn't seem to take it as hard as the mother, but in a short time every one begins to notice that he is looking old.

When a poor man thinks of wealth he thinks how he would spend it, rather than how he would invest it, which is probably one reason he is a poor man thinking of wealth.

The Quiet Observer says: "I'm not exactly superstitious, but I believe in signs. For instance: A button on a man's coat is a sign that he's a lodge member, and a button off a man's vest is a sign that he's married."

GLADNESS.

I'm glad that it is not my fate to soldier cans at Kankakee;
I'm glad I do not have to knock around at Knoxville, Tennessee;
It gives me joy to know that I am not at Rutland in a rut
Or earning what I eat and wear by cutting in Connecticut.

Few pleasant moments would be mine if I at Warsaw had to saw,
Or were by circumstances compelled to sleep in straw at Haverstraw;
I might with little effort name a hundred blessings that I lack,
But I am glad I do not need to run a hack in Hackensack.

—WILL EKBLAD.

WIFEY.

There is gladness in her gladness when her husband treats her right,
There is sadness in her sadness if from him she gets a slight;
But the gladness of her gladness And the sadness of her sadness Aren't in it with her madness—when the brute stays out all night.

—Judge.

Over Chamber of Commerce

Madam, if you want a healthy household make your kitchen the most attractive room in your house

THIS IS THE ADVICE OF DR. WILEY, CHIEF OF THE UNITED STATES BUREAU OF CHEMISTRY—AN AUTHORITY ON THE PREPARATION OF FOODS. IN A RECENT ADDRESS TO WOMEN HE SAID:

"MAKE YOUR KITCHENS THE MOST ATTRACTIVE PLACES OF YOUR HOME. PUT UP YOUR HANGINGS AND YOUR WORKS OF ART OUT THERE, AND WHEN GUESTS COME, TAKE THEM INTO THE WHOLE SOME, BEAUTIFUL, SANITARY AND ARTISTIC KITCHEN, WITH THE ROAST BEEF, THE FRESH CHICKENS AND THE GREEN VEGETABLES INTERSPERSED AMONG THE HANGINGS AND THE TABLE COVERINGS, INSTEAD OF CONDUCTING THESE GUESTS INTO THE DRAWING ROOM WHICH HASN'T BEEN AIRED FOR A WEEK.

The First Essential of an Attractive Kitchen is a Gas Range.

WHEN THE GAS RANGE COMES IN, DIRT, DRUDGERY, SOOT AND ASHES GO OUT.

OUR NEW BUSINESS DEPARTMENT WILL GIVE YOU THE FACTS AND FIGURES TO HELP YOU DECIDE. CALL US UP TO DAY.
