MAKE MARKET ON COOS BAY

Interesting and Instructive Article on Local Market Conditions.

EDITOR TIMES: The Chamber of Commerce is unremitting in its efforts to advertise the resources of Coos Bay. The business men of the community support that movement with time and money. The "Message from Coos Bay" seems with fair promise of satisfying returns from almost any pursuit or enterprise which might be undertaken on Coos Bay, and in the face of all this, these same business men or those of them who are in the business of feeding the populace, annually send away from Coos Bay some $18,000 or $20,000 of Coos Bay money for the purchase of food stuffs, ninety per cent of which could be raised right here at home. All of these advertising statements are unquestionably true. But, unfortunately, much of our agricultural beast lacks tangible evidence in the shape of any commercial volume of produce, excepting of course potatoes and apples. Now, who is to blame for this condition of affairs? The farmer will tell you it is the storekeeper, and the storekeeper will accuse the farmer, and the curious feature of the situation is that they are both right. Merchants and farmers, like all other forces in nature, follow lines of least resistance, which means, to the merchant (who seeks to buy), a well stocked and dependable supply, and to the farmer, the producer (who seeks to sell), a steady and dependable demand. So much for general principles. The details are more interesting. On Saturday, May 28th, the berry growers sent into Marshfield great quantities of strawberries. The early arrivals received the best price, of course, but inside of a few hours the bottom went out and stores were SELLING at prices less than they had PAID for the arrivals of earlier in the day, which meant that shipments arriving late realized enough less than those earlier to cut the profit to the grower to such an extent as to greatly disgust that gentleman. Now, whose fault was that? The early arrival wore a contagious smile, but the later was "sore" from the bone out. At whom, and for why? Let us mark the foregoing instance "Exhibit A," a disorganized, overwhelming, unloading upon the local market, of a highly perishable product. Next, a farmer with whom I talked, brought in a quantity of vegetables and offered them to his dealer. The dealer agreed to take the produce at one cent a pound. The dealer already had a stock of the same article.

She put in out of the storm at an isolated spot and consequently no word was received from her to alleviate the fears.

Aasen Brothers Said to Be Planning to Take Advantage of Option On It.

NOTHING OFFICIAL IS GIVEN OUT YET.

Johnson Lumber Company to Take Coquille Mill and Mercantile Co. Mill.

Buy Your

(Special to The Times.)

COQUILLE, Ore., June 9.—According to a report here, Aasen Brothers have secured an option on the Reynolds mill at North Bend with a view of moving the plant to the Coquille and establishing a new mill here. The option is understood to expire about the middle of this month and while no official statement has been made, the belief is that Aasen Brothers will take advantage of it. San Francisco lumbermen may also be interested.

It is understood that the option price is between $20,000 and $25,000. The mill is practically a new one and the machinery in it cost nearly double what the buyers are about to secure it for.

It is stated that the Reynolds are desirous of selling it because the location is not an advantageous one. When they built the mill on Pony Inlet, they had a partial promise from the Simpson Lumber Company that a ship canal would be put through to the mill, bring deep water and shipping facilities or that an electric line would be built down to it. Neither of these have been secured so they have been handicapped in marketing the output.

Aasen Brothers have been operating the mill of the Coquille Mill and Mercantile Company here, but it is understood that the Johnson Lumber Company, which operates the Johnson mill, will take over the latter under a lease or purchase it. Aasen Brothers, have been among the principal loggers on the Coquille for some time and have been very successful.
