WHY BY PROXY?

WHAT DOES the good Chairman George mean anyway, when he says his assembly will give us "better officials?" What variety of Igorrotes does he think the Oregon voters are? Is his conception of the Oregon electorate a vision of long bearded and long haired men, hatless, shoeless, living in huts and subsisting on dried fish and huckleberries? Is it his idea that the average workingman only knows enough to draw his wages Saturday night and find the way to and from his work? Is it his idea that the average farmer is too illiterate to do anything more than to work in the fields all day and to know when and how to go to and from his meals? Does he think that an average farm hand doesn't know enough to ride a mule to water and that when he is put to ploughing he merely stays put until somebody comes and leads him to his dinner? What else does the good Chairman George mean when he insinuates that the average voter doesn't know the difference between a good candidate and a spotted cayuse?

Who pays the taxes in this State? Who feeds Oregon? Who grows the foodstuffs; who fashions the raw material into finished products; whose hands take it from the soil and make it into food, clothing and wealth; what men build the houses, operate the mills and move the trains, steamboats and electric cars? What would Chairman George do without these men that he says can't select a good official? What would Oregon be without these men that Chairman George's assembly insists haven't sense enough to govern and must be governed by proxy?—Journal.

THE FISHING INDUSTRY.

COOS BAY boosters and business men are neglecting an important industry in their indifference to the fishing industry here. Deep sea fishing off the coast and the salmon run in the bay and rivers are both possible of large development.

Washington, our neighbor on the north, leads all the States of the union in the fishing industry, Alaska alone exceeding it in this business. And the business is as yet in its infancy. Undoubtedly fishing is destined to become one of the most important industries in this country. The use of fish for food in place of meat is rapidly increasing and with the continued rise in the price of beef and pork, the use of fish will become more and more general. There is no limit to the fish supply. None of the conditions which are rapidly reducing the supply of beef and pork apply to the fishing industry.

The peculiar position of Coos Bay makes it susceptible of great development in this important business. All that is needed is men with energy and capital and knowledge of the business to see it become one of the important wealth-producing resources of this rich section.
