YACHTSMEN'S PARADISE.

OVERS of open and rigorous sport are missing a lot of exciting entertainment by crediting statements that yachting by sail is not feasible on Coos Bay.

Some say that the wind is too strong and that the surrounding hills leave becalmed areas, and that long draws let in dangerous gusts. Of course they do, and it is just these conditions that the skillful mariner evades and takes advantage of in forwarding his boat to a goal.

The man who trims the sheet and puts the lee rail awash for the thrills he gets—thrills that the motor boatman never knows—goes prepared for the drawbacks and the dangers threatened and takes part of his pay in the conquests he has made.

Toiled with by zephyrs and swept by half gales, sometimes within the same hour, every whim of wind and wave may be turned to profit by a dauntless yachtsman who knows the game.

The sport of sailing should commend itself to many in that it may be indulged in at a cost as low as $30 a boat.
