Official Paper of Coos County.
OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF MARSHFIELD.
THE ASSEMBLY COUNT.

"During the closing moments of the session, which was marked by the greatest of harmony and cordiality among the Republicans, S. D. Pulford and L. J. Roberts each made a speech attacking the Coos Bay Times in no uncertain language for having accused the Myrtle Point Enterprise and its informants with having falsified as to the figures of the attendance at the first meeting of the Assembly. Mr. Maloney, representing the Times at the meeting, made no reply to their attacks."—Bandon Recorder.

This is another example of the contemptible, sneaking means employed by certain individuals who are attempting to bolster up the assembly by misrepresentations and who will resort to anything in an effort to discredit the truth when it brings their methods to light. As the editor of the Bandon Recorder was not personally at the last assembly, or the first one for that matter, the Times excuses him for being unwittingly the victim of a sneak who attempts to gain prestige for his cause by deliberate unfairness. If the Recorder will give the name of its informant, the Times will endeavor to place him in the proper light.

As was published in the Times' account of the Assembly, one S. D. Pulford of Myrtle Point did arise in the meeting and ask that an official count be taken of those present so that "it would not be misrepresented by the Times." He had scarcely uttered the words when J. W. Bennett of Marshfield, a leader in the Assembly movement, arose and informed Mr. Pulford that he had personally counted those present at the first assembly and that the Times' statement of the number was correct, his personal count varying only one or two from the number (67) given by the Times and stated that such a small difference might easily occur in his casual enumeration of a crowd.

Why didn't the Recorder's informant be fair and give Mr. Bennett's statement as to who was right? Wasn't Mr. Bennett, who took a leading part in the Assembly meetings, certain to give the Assembly credit for the largest number who participated in it? The Times' representative was at the second Assembly and did not answer Mr. Pulford because it was unnecessary. A leading member of the Assembly, who was as much interested in the Assembly's success as Mr. Pulford answered him without any "if" or "ands." Mr. Pulford didn't raise his voice to question it, either.

And besides, the Times man was there not as a member of the Assembly who had a voice in its proceedings, but merely as a newspaper reporter to give the public the correct news of the gathering instead of allowing Mr. Pulford, Mr. Roberts, the Recorder's informant and others of that class to deceive them.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that neither the Myrtle Point Enterprise or the Coquille Sentinel, which had previously charged the Times with misrepresenting the number present at the 21st Assembly, gave Mr. Pulford a word of thanks for the valiant manner in which he came to their rescue. The Enterprise had stated that the committee on credentials had "reported over 100 present," which the committee did not do, and later insisted, when it discovered this mistake, that there were over one hundred present. The Coquille Sentinel stated there were one hundred and forty present. Why weren't either the Enterprise or the Sentinel fair enough to report the statements of Mr. Pulford and Mr. Bennett? Neither the editor of the Enterprise nor the Sentinel had counted the attendance, yet they questioned an honest count of it, and apparently are not fair enough to admit their mistake.

In the "official count" of the second Assembly, the Times was again upheld. Prior to the "official count," the Times' reporter had stated that there were forty-five present, but Editor Savage and others contended there were over fifty. The "official count" showed there were forty-five. Thanks to Mr. Pulford's endeavor, the "official count" prevented Assembly prevaricators from going forth and claiming that a hundred or two hundred were present.

As to Mr. Roberts, his remarks were too disconnected and dealt too much with glittering generalities to merit reply. He had apparently primed himself to follow Mr. Pulford, his "assistant political boss of Myrtle Point," but Mr. Bennett intervened with an incontrovertible statement of the situation and took all the wind out of his sails, but he whined because any one had the temerity to question the motives of himself or his fellow Assembly promoters.
