CHANCES GOOD FOR SETTLERS

Bishop Scadding Thinks Great Opportunities Exist in Coos and Curry Counties.

Bishop Scadding of Portland, who gave a lecture at the Masonic Opera house Saturday evening is highly enthusiastic about the opportunities for settlers in the dairy districts of Coos and Curry counties, according to a recent account of a trip through Southern Oregon which appeared in the Portland Journal. He advocates the division of the large ranches held by few, into 40 or 60 acre holdings, and selling these smaller dairies to new comers with eastern capital, who will add spirit and life to the country, and advance its civilization and financial standing. At present the holdings are too large and held by too few, and as one of the results, the property in many places is run down and in poor repair.

At the Lawrence ranch, on Pistol river the bishop found quite a gathering of college graduates. Of the eight who sat down to dinner there were two Harvard men, one Yale, one Cornell, one Toronto University, one lady from Wellesly. Mr. Brookins, president of the Washington university, St. Louis, and of the Brookings Box and Lumber company was on a tour of inspection of his vast timber holdings in Curry county.

Bishop Scadding speaks in the highest appreciation of the hospitality and courtesy his party has received through the country. His fondness for buttermilk has become so well known that dairy men greet the stage with pitchers of it when they know he is coming.

One creamery sent a demi-john with its compliments, but the bishop did not like the looks of the vessel and declined, until the liquid poured out white and thick, and proved beyond doubt to be buttermilk, when he partook copiously himself and treated the other occupants of the stage who had a good deal of fun out of the incident at the bishop's expense.
