MARSHFIELD SCHOOL NEWS

THE SCHOOLMARM.

The teacher in the country school, expounding lessons, sum and rule, and teaching children how to rise to heights where lasting honor lies, deserves a fat and handsome wage, for she's a triumph of this age. No better work than her's is done beneath the good old shining sun; she builds the future of the state, she guides the youths who will be great; she gives the childish spirit wings, and points the way to noble things. And we, who do all things so well, and of our "institooshuns" yell, reward the teacher with a roll that brings a shudder to her soul. We have our coin done up in crates, and gladly hand it to the skates who fuss around in politics and fool us with their time-worn tricks. In congress one cheap common jay will loaf a week and draw more pay than some tired teacher, tolling near, will ever see in half a year. If I was running this old land, I'd have a lot of statesmen canned; and congressmen, and folks like those, would have to work for board and clothes; I'd put the lid on scores of snaps, and pour into the teachers' laps the wealth that now away is sinned, for words and wiggles and wind.

MARSHFIELD SCHOOL NEWS.

Two hundred and sixty-one pupils of the Central school vacated the building in 70 seconds at fire drill on Wednesday. The pupils showed a very commendable discipline both in leaving the building and in returning to it.

The special course in plain, fancy, and invalid cookery offered by Miss Kaufmann, teacher of domestic science, has been elected by the girls of the senior class. There are 45 sixth and seventh grade girls in Miss Kaufmann's grade sewing classes.

A practical talk on "Use of the Library" was given by Miss Jameson to the students of the High school Wednesday morning. General directions were given for getting facts and accumulating material on any topic. Some especially useful sources of information were mentioned specifically. Students were urged to train themselves to read—during the school year at least—some books that were not of the nature of fiction, but rather books that were informational in character. Miss Jameson is planning to reach every room in the building before the year passes and it need hardly be said that she will be a most welcome visitor.

Superintendents and principals of Coos county will meet at Coquille Saturday to discuss matters pertaining to debates, athletics, oratorical contests, etc. Superintendent Tiedgen and Miss Montgomery, principal of the High school, will attend.

Plans are under way for organizing a high school orchestra and a chorus. Miss George, instructor in music, is very much interested in both organizations.

Comparison of the present enrollment with the census list of last spring shows that there are 102 pupils in the schools that were not in the city at the time the census was taken.

If you are in arrears for The Times, you can take advantage of this clubbing or money saving offer by paying up your back subscription and paying a year in advance.

The Times has endeavored to secure a list of what I believe to be the most desirable publications for its subscribers and prints it herewith, but if you desire any other publication, The Times will endeavor to get it for you at clubbing rates.

If you can't call at The Times office, mail us your order for publications desired and check or postoffice order for amount specified.

EVANS WILL OPPOSE "DRYS"

Hero of Naval Battles Says Prohibition Would Ruin This State.

The Portland Oregonian recently published the following interview with Rear Admiral Evans of the United States navy:

When Rear Admiral Evans was told that a vote was soon to be taken in Oregon on the question of prohibition, he threw up his hands and exclaimed:

"What do they want to do? Ruin the state?"

Admiral Evans believes in temperance in all things, but draws the line sharply at prohibition. His personal experience in Maine, when he was commander of the North Atlantic fleet, caused him to take a firm stand against such radical restrictive laws, and resulted in his forbidding ships under his command to visit the harbor of Portland, Me.

"Conditions were so bad in Portland," said Admiral Evans, "that I refused to allow any of our ships to visit that port. When the men went ashore they were met on the dock by a lot of parasites who steered them into some low dives. Thinking that would be the only opportunity to get a drink they gorged themselves on vile, wood alcohol poison, which made them so drunk that they could not even recognize their officers. The actions of the police toward our men was so repugnant that it was not right to allow them to go ashore. It was the worst spot I ever saw in my life.

"We never had such trouble in a city where there were open saloons. In cities where there are open saloons the men knew what they were drinking and could drink temperately. In Maine it was the thought of the last chance to get a drink when they were shown one of these dives, and the vile, adulterated stuff that was sold them, that caused them to become intoxicated and go beyond the bounds of discipline.

"The prohibitionists forced the canteen out of the army and navy. I think it was the worst law that was ever passed. You say they are going to vote to make Oregon dry? Do they want to ruin the state?"

While in the city Admiral Evans commended the Oregon Naval Reserve. He said it was necessary to have a trained reserve force in readiness at all times to reinforce depleted crews and take charge of warships. He said that when a war vessel puts into Astoria or runs up the Columbia river to Portland and the crews are given leaves of absence, the Naval Reserve would have an opportunity to take the vessel out to sea for training. The admiral also recommended boat racing as good training for the naval reserve and said it is a valuable drill for handling small craft.
