Due Tomorrow.—The steamer Newport did not leave Portland until today and is due here some time tomorrow.

Will Give Reception.—A reception will be given to Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Zugg Monday evening at the church from 8 to 10 o'clock. All friends are cordially invited to be present.

Schooner Ready.—John Anderson, who has had a new gasoline schooner, the Randolph, built on the Coquille river, was in the city. His schooner is all ready for sea and he will run her to Curry county ports.

At Roseburg.—Among those from Coos county registered at the McCallan hotel in Roseburg this week were the following: George Terry of Coos Bay; Judge John S. Coke and C. F. McKnight of Marshfield; James Watson, C. W. Endicott and J. S. Lyons of Coquille; M. W. Miller of Myrtle Point, and S. Cotton and Roy Ogden of Marshfield.

Will Take Vacation.—Rev. G. Leroy Hall will leave the first of the week on a vacation. He will visit Medford and Pendleton, in both of which cities he was formerly located, and will also attend the Oregon State Baptist convention, which will be held at Portland October 18 to 21.

Cost of Candidates.—In giving the statement of money expended by candidates at the recent election the Roseburg Review says: Fred K. Gettins of Coos county, unsuccessful candidate for water superintendent of this division, spent $258.90; James T. Chinnock, successful anti-assembly nominee, spent less than $100.

essary to violate the rules and land a wallop between the umbilicus and the watch pocket he did it without blushing. Party ties rested easy on his soul and the sooner any party recognizes these facts and rightly interprets the handwriting the better it will be for that party. The old-time torchlight procession, brass bands and pussyfoot gyrations as a means of proselyting is fast becoming obsolete. Year by year the average man is becoming better informed generally. As he advances in education and intelligence, the more independent he becomes and the less use he has for bosses and leading strings.

If the president, a few years ago, had told the folks that a measure had reduced the tariff on necessities, on an average below what it was before and that it was the best measure that could be passed, the statement would have been taken for granted; but now, in the face of such a statement the people make goo goo eyes and go steadily on protesting, because the statement is not true and the people know it is not true, and it is idle to try to stuff them with any such fodder. Shouts for the "Grand Old Party" are all right in their place; we are all proud of it; it has done wonderful things in the past, but it must march on; it must do things, keep on doing things, and then some. The people want and expect results and results they are going to have. The party cannot fold its banners, sit idly down, stand pat on its past achievements and continue to flourish; it must act; it must functionate, else the procession will mournfully pay it homage as a sacred relic and pass on. The republican party until recently has been the party of progress, and therein has been the secret of its long life and success. All other parties of any consequence have been only negative.

The true friend of the "Grand Old Party" is the man who forges ahead in quest of better things. No man nor party ever grows old or obsolete who keeps abreast of and step with the procession. Only the stitillers and the standpatters fossilize and at last find a resting place in the garbage dump.

"There are no swallows in last year's nest."

Statement No. 1 and the direct primary are creatures of the republican party. The people gladly adopted them as a means of escape from shameful political debauchery. Since the adoption they have indicated at the polls many times in one way and another that they do not intend to abandon their wards. Such being the case then why do men insist upon forcing the issue and placing the success of the party they so loudly proclaim to love in jeopardy? Why not gracefully bow to the inevitable and take the medicine, though it may be distasteful?

That unworthy men favor the primary and Statement No. 1, I do not doubt. But that is beside the question. Because the Savior counted among his followers one Judas is not an argument against the great principles taught by the Master. A little while ago some party fixers, puffed up with pride and pie, from the houstops shouted, "War to the knife, and the knife to the hilt." Today these same artists with chattering teeth are begging quarter and party harmony. The derisive cry of "populist" and "democrat" has died away; it is a different tune in a different key. No more is anybody reading anyone out of the party. Hysterical vows are made that there shall be no more monkeying with the buzz saws; that not a hair of the people's sacred goat herd shall be so much as frizzled in the future. The desire to lambast a perverse and egotistic opponent is very great sometimes, even though he is down. But in this case what shall we gain by following up the fight? The democrats don't like us and if we shall vote for and with them how does that help us? If we don't vote at all we don't help anybody. Every good citizen votes and upholds the right as he sees it. I guess we had better stay with the folks. It looks to me like that is the best we can do. I think we had better do it and bear in mind that

"While the lamp holds out to burn, The vilest sinner may return."

GEO. WATKINS.

GEO. WATKINS ON PRIMARY

To the Editor of the Times:

The primary election has come and gone. It may have left some scars behind, but none, I hope, that time will not efface. Any one can be a proud winner, but it requires manhood, forbearance and courage to be a game loser.

The late contest among the republicans, taken all in all, has been a peppery family row. Since it is over most of us, I think, have felt both the emulation that comes with victory and the pangs that go with defeat for the reason that we have experienced some things that please and some that do not.

While we are tenderly nursing the wounds that are ours and grinning at the bumps on the other fellow is a good time, I believe, to dump it all over and make an inventory.

As the writer views the situation it would seem that the late election has again demonstrated the fact that a fair majority of the voters of this state know what they are about and what they want without the aid of any assembly or other go-between.

For several years the people of the state have been trying to establish and settle certain principles. Sometimes in expressing themselves along these lines at the polls some of their acts on the surface seem quite bewildering, yet I believe there are logical reasons for all apparent inconsistencies. If the voter found himself so hampered or hedged about that he could not express his views in the way he most desired he did it in some other way, regardless of party affiliations or consequences. He knew what he wanted and reached for it without asking.

If in order to express his ideas and have them duly noted it was nec-
