REPUBLICANS GET TOGETHER.

THERE was a ring of the rousing old time republicanism in the talks at the republican smoker last Saturday evening. Some of the little talks reached the dignity of real oratory in their earnestness and eloquence. Everyone was imbued with the spirit of harmony and with the necessity of republicans asserting themselves by going to the polls and casting a ballot for the men and measures the party has endorsed.

The Republicans of Oregon, with all the prestige and virtue of their recorded majority, have named the men they want in office; they have realized the right to have them, and are united in the purpose of sealing the dictum by the logical reiteration of their primary vote, on Tuesday week. This they can do if they stay on guard and fend promptly against the unexpected, the sly and insidious attempt to bunco and bully and bamboozle on the part of the enemy at the last moment; they are adroit at such tactics and every agency we possess for disrupting and defeating such plays ust be "cleared for action" and held useable on the instant. In all other ways, we have them "on the hip" and bent for a fall that will mean practical annihilation for the minority in Oregon.

NOT INCONSISTENT.

ONE OF the interesting and pleasing developments that result from the meetings of the Marshfield Republican Club is the definite understanding of party principles.

Anti-assembly and assembly republicans meet on the common platform of party principles. This was demonstrated by W. J. Butler's speech Saturday evening in which he proved there was nothing inconsistent in a republican being either assembly or anti-assembly before the primary and supporting the whole ticket afterward.

Mr. Butler is right. There is nothing inconsistent in this position. There should be nothing embarrassing about it. But in the heat of inter-party debate the people often lose sight of the fact that it is inter-party debate, and jump at the conclusion that party lines are being broken down when they are not. It cannot be said too often that the progressive republican movement has not been a movement in the direction of present day democracy.

There would be an end of the progressive movement the moment it was announced as part of the program to defeat assembly candidates after they have been regularly chosen and endorsed at the primaries. Such an act is democratic and not republican.

JAY BOWERMAN IS A GOOD FIGHTER.

(From the Salem Journal.) The Republican candidate for governor elicits admiration because he is a good fighter.

When he talks to a campaign audience he strikes telling blows straight from the shoulder.

He does not spend his time telling funny stories.

To Jay Bowerman life is real, life is earnest.

As a poor boy in Marion county he was not hunting soft clerical jobs.

He mauled rails and hauled cordwood for a living.

He has hands and arms and a physique developed by hard labor.

In the legislature he was always dead in earnest for or against a proposition.

He has come up from the ranks of the toilers through hardship, and represents the laborer and the producer.

He has held no lucrative political jobs and has not made any easy money in politics.

Three dollars a day for forty days has been the limit of fat jobs with him in Oregon politics.

He turned down the big transcontinental railroads, and voted for the people's railroad amendment.

Jay Bowerman is a good fighter, with clean hands, on the side of the common people.

The Republican party is fortunate in having a fighter for fundamental principles as its candidate for governor this year.

Mr. Tillman announces that he is going to stay in the senate as long as he lives. Maybe he will stay longer. There are some dead ones in the senate now.

We live and learn. Apropos of which we beg to announce that the scientific discovery has been made that a cow's stomach turns completely over every time she eats a full meal.

Ours is a glorious country. It is doubtful if there is another in the world that can produce as many attractive unmarried women who are capable of earning a good living for a husband.

WITH THE TOAST AND TEA

GOOD EVENING.

Why slander we the times? What crimes Have days and years, that we Thus charge them with iniquity?

If thy desire it be To see The times prove good, be thou But such thyself, and surely know That all thy days to thee Shall, spite of mischief, happily be. —Joseph Beaumont.

A CAMPAIGN IDYL.

(About 10 years after Kipling) A fool there was and he sought a job, Even as you and I. His rashness would make the angels sob, We called him a few things, but never a snob, Even as you and I.

Oh, the pledges he got and the lies he got, Even as you and I. Sometimes he was cold, and sometimes he was hot; At times he was certain; at times he was not; And now we know he was always "not"— Even as you and I.

Oh, the babes he kissed and the babes he kissed— Even as you and I. And the votes that he counted upon but missed Ere time for the balloting made him desist. He surely was jolly well glad to desist Even as you and I.

Then the words he spake and the drought he break— Even as you and I. And the cure that he took for the bite of the snake, And the thirst he attempted in vain to slake— We'd known all the time what a failure he'd make— Even as you and I.

Clothes that are not paid for do not make the man. Many a self-made man should be heartily ashamed of his job. A woman really suffers in silence when she is so hoarse she can't talk about it.

A SURE SHOT.

He saw a deer, blazed at it hot The hasty shot went wide; But tho' he failed to guide the shot, By jinks! he shot the guide. R. O. GRAVES.

Somebody says there will be no loading in heaven. Next thing we expect to hear that the gold-paved streets have no shady side. There was a young lady named Banker, Who slept while the ship was at anchor; She awoke in dismay When she heard the mate say "Now hoist up the top sheet and spanker." BOB BOOTH.

Everybody in the world should be happy. The young have their dreams and the old have their pleasant memories to keep them company. LIGHT AND LIFE. The sea is blue When the sky is fair, But of ashen hue When the clouds are there. It is dark and gray In the rayless light Of a leaden day Or a moonless night. So life seems bright When the sky is clear, But nebby's right When there is no beer. H. J. McKEOWN.

INJURED PLAYERS.

The friends of Coquille say their team would have made a better showing if the team had been in better form. A few minor accidents recently tended to cripple them some. Among those affected were the following: While Collier was gazing out of a car window on his way over from Coquille, Sunday morning, he injured his opticillus gazorum. He was not able to see the goal and will not be able to gaze again for several weeks. As Belloni was reading up the new rules Saturday, he sprained a brain cell. It will be several days before he resumes his reading. Johnson had four fried eggs for breakfast Sunday, and temporarily injured his appetite. Glenn broke a noun and two verbs in an argument but he stuck in the game just the same. While sleeping Saturday night, Chisholm injured his snororum and may never snore again so well.

TO AN ELECTRIC LIGHT

Twinkle, twinkle, little arc, With your very sickly spark Up above my head you swing— You're a very ugly thing! When the shades of night are come And I'm working hard at home, Then it is your "system" works With its splutters, jumps and jerks I don't care what people say, You're a bilious, greenish ray, And where'er they worship you Everything is black and blue.

Very likely you surpass Candles, oil and even gas; Still, allow me to remark, I don't like you, little arc! —THE KICKER.
