

OREGON BANK CASHIER ENDS LIFE AT HOME IN SEASIDE

Edward Henninger Blows Head Off With Shotgun As Result of Looting.

STITUTION IS IN VERY BAD CONDITION

Reported That Deposits and Capital Used to Aid Relative's Sawmill.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

SEASIDE, Ore., Nov. 4.—Edward Henninger, cashier of the Seaside bank, committed suicide in the front yard of his home today by blowing his head with a shotgun. It is a result of the alleged looting of the bank by himself and associates of all the deposits. The Seaside Lumber and Manufacturing Company, of which Walter Henninger is manager, is closely connected with the bank, and it is alleged the money and deposits of the bank, including the funds of the city of Seaside, were appropriated from the bank to keep the saw mill running. Walter Henninger is in the East to secure funds for the business and money was expected from him yesterday but it failed to arrive. A few days ago, the pay checks of the saw mill employees were cashed for one pretext or another. Yesterday some eastern people who were figuring on buying the bank, examined the books and it is alleged that at the close of the investigation they told Cashier Edward Henninger, "It was all up with him" and they left refusing to have anything more to do with the institution. The bank was unable to meet its demands and it is alleged, Henninger then killed himself. Hundreds of people here carried deposits in the bank. The exact condition of the institution will not be known until the state bank examiner makes an investigation.

NAVAL RESERVES DRILL.

At their armory last evening the two divisions of the Naval Reserves held their first drill. The meeting was held for the purpose of completing the details of the organization. Lieutenant Straw, who has been assigned to the command of the two divisions made the necessary appointments and details after which Lieutenants Stone and Graves made short talks to the organizations on the subjects of duty and discipline. About seventy-five men were present last evening. The regular drills will in the future be held at 7:30 o'clock on each Monday evening. In the future all men not legally excused must be present promptly on the hour set for drill under penalties usually prescribed in such cases.

COPPLE'S POSITION.

R. A. Copple, the Democratic candidate for Joint Representative should be elected. That, Coos County should have the representative. Now if Mr. Copple was sincere in this contention he would have sought the nomination for Coos county alone and not the joint. The evident reason Mr. Copple did not do this, is there was strong reason to believe that E. Rackleff would be the Republican nominee and Mr. Copple did not want to tackle him.—(Paid by J. S. Barton, Secy. County Cent. Com.)

NOTICE.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the People's Co-operative Company will be held Tuesday evening, November 15, 1910; at the hour of eight o'clock at the store of the above company in Marshfield, Oregon; for the purpose of filing Supplementary Articles of Incorporation and the amendment of the By-Laws.

F. S. RIEBE,

LET US TALK IT OVER

THE commercial situation in Coos Bay is so simple, and its problem so obvious that neither requires more than mere statement. This is a growing community. All of its enterprises are in process of development. Coos Bay is in the same financial situation that any great private corporation is during its formative period, and that is the necessary expenditure exceeds the income. And the vital requirement is continued, systematic and dependable re-inforcement.

To state this proposition a little more specifically, money comes into any community from only two possible channels. One is in return for the products of the soil, and the other is in return for manufactured commodities. Any other income is mere exchange for which the "quid pro quo" must be paid in cash. Therefore the vital need in any community is that its manufacturing institutions be encouraged and developed and its lands be closely occupied and scientifically cultivated.

Nature has endowed Coos Bay with one of the greatest natural harbors on the Pacific coast. It only remains for man to accept and protect this God-given heritage. To do this Coos Bay must be made a port of entry for all ocean-going vessels. This can only be done under the systematic direction of organized effort through the Port Commission or similarly organized association for the advancement of Coos Bay.

Manufacturing on Coos Bay is a yet merely sporadic. No systematic, concerted and persistent effort has been made to attract manufacturing institutions to this community. The result is that we have for sale no manufactured products to speak of except timber and the crying need of the retail business of Coos Bay is payrolls.

Nearly all of the staple commodities could be profitably manufactured on Coos Bay. With an abundance and almost inexhaustible supply of coal that means cheap power, there is no reason why furniture, shoes, clothing and a hundred other lesser important products should not be manufactured here, but it all depends on a harbor that will admit ships that will take these products to all parts of the world.

In point of civic enterprise Coos Bay and Marshfield are far behind Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other coast cities that are going forward at rapid strides. Two reasons exist for this condition: one is that the very bigness of this section and the richness of its natural resources anesthetizes its own people. There may be a physiological, or atmospheric, or psychic, or mystic, or some other reason for this, but without any attempt to discover the why, that it is a fact there is no doubt.

The other reason is one far less creditable to the people of this community and that is that the business men of Coos Bay do not entirely trust each other and some of them live in mortal terror of a certain self-constituted dictator whose toe has been felt under the crupper of many an otherwise valorous Coos Bay citizen. In short, among its other infirmities, Coos Bay has a bad case of the "Fraldy cats."

It is a pity that the men of this community who have possessed the determination to build up, against almost inconceivable odds, the splendid institutions of this city; men who have sweat crimson through ordeals that would have crushed men who were less than supermen.—It is a pity that these same men should go into a panic and run from a feminine recrudescence of the Earl of Gloucester, and run from a broomstick. Why does not somebody have the courage to stand still and let the blow fall, only to discover that, after all, this particular warrior, in a real collision, can always be depended upon to throw down the butcher knife, and pull hair.

As a matter of fact it is beneath the dignity and self-respect of the business men of Coos Bay, and infinitely unworthy of the future of this great community to allow its progress to be stayed either by an unworthy sentiment of mutual distrust or by a yet more unworthy fear of a common foe who deserves no fear. The right and courageous thing to do is for the capable and resourceful men of this community to get together and so occupy themselves with the great problems which are loudly calling for attention that they will have neither thought nor care for the things unworthy that have halted the prosperity of this community.
