WILL INSPECT WAGON ROADS

Representatives of Coos County Court to Make Trip to Roseburg.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

Judge John F. Hall, County Engineer Gould and probably Commissioner Dement will leave in the morning over the old Coos Bay wagon road to inspect that and also to attend the Oregon Good Roads convention which will be held in Portland next week. The commissioners had been planning for some time on attending the good roads convention and their decision to make the trip out over the Coos Bay Wagon road at the same time was reached when R. M. Jennings and Hugh McLain of the Marshfield Chamber of Commerce, appeared before that body this week. Their visit resulted from complaints from Contractor Barnard that the road might become impassable this winter, and the mail service stopped. They requested that the county court give it immediate attention to prevent any trouble of this kind and the commissioners decided to try and keep it up in the best shape possible this winter and make permanent improvements next summer.

The county court has ordered the road supervisors along the road to get busy and see that the roads are kept up in good condition. On the Cherry hill grade the contractor has failed to complete the planking of a long stretch, although the contract called for it to be done by October 15, and Judge Hall and the commissioners have notified his bondsmen that they will have to forfeit the bond if it is not finished immediately.

JOSH NELSON ABOUT LIGHT

Audience at Council Meeting Favors His Petition and Hugh McLain Pay Cost.

During an interim in the city council proceedings this week, the discussion as to the length of service of Councilman Nelson came up. It was found he had served twelve years on the council. This gave Hugh McLain an inspiration and he moved that as a testimonial for this long service in the city's behalf, Councilman Nelson should be given the arc light on his corner which he has long sought. Mr. McLain happens to live on the same corner but he didn't say anything about it being a testimonial for him. Mayor Straw fell in line and put motion, the audience voting in favor of it except Councilman Powers who insisted that it should be one of the fancy lighting posts. Mayor Straw declared the motion carried. Then City Attorney Goss moved that in view of the many courtesies shown Contractor McLain by the city council, that Mr. McLain be asked to defray the expenses of the light. This motion also passed. Councilman Albrecht, who is chairman of the lighting committee, voted in favor of the motion that Mr. McLain pay for the light. Mr. Albrecht has refused to recommend the arc light which Councilman Nelson has so long sought because the city cannot stand the expense.

"See that old guy over there chewing a wheat straw?" asked the Big Brown Rooster of the Little Red Hen at the poultry show this morning.

"Well, the long-whiskered gink has been going up one side the pens and down the other trying to steal eggs out of the coops."

"You don't say," clucked the L. R. H. "But then, that's nothing; that smarty over there with the red necktie has sprung the old gag about the chicken crossing the road a dozen times and the only rise he's got has been the laugh out of his own freckled face. But I heard a good one on you, old top, at that," cawed the Little Red Hen, pecking away at a slab of bologna sausage.

"What was it, dearie?" asked the B. B. R. scratching his left wattle.

"Oh, a fellow just passed down the line whistling 'Everybody Works But Father,' and I guess he must have been in the poultry business himself, some time."

"Say, Long Legs, did you ever do an honest piece of work in your life?" cooed the Little Red Hen.

"Sure thing, I learned to crow in three sharps and two flats and I've had the pip twice, and read 'Chanticleer' all through. Say, honey bunch, did you ever have the pip?"

"No, but I'm aces up on roup and I've never laid a cold-storage egg in my life."

"You haven't anything to crow about Reddy; I never laid one either," remarked the bold old rooster with a grin, "and I'd like to add that you ladies have a soft snap now since the incubator has been getting in its fine work. You don't do anything but lay an egg once in a while and cackle about it all the rest of the morning."

"Say, Old Rough-neck, what have you ever done to get a medal?" the
