PUBLIC SPIRIT MOST IMPORTANT

MAYOR R. F. Maddox of Atlanta, a leading civic advance mayor of the country, had something to say at the recent meeting of the American League of Municipalities at St. Paul on the subject of public spirit apropos to conditions in nearly every American city where a certain element either opposes civic improvements or declines its aid in the cause. Said Mayor Maddox:

"Public spirit may be defined as the possession by the citizen of the willingness to give freely at all times of his labor and his money to the accomplishment of any worthy enterprise. The founding of a university, the promotion of a great fair or exposition, the building of auditoriums, hospitals and civic centers, are but a few of the many things which are undertaken and carried to consummation by citizens who recognize public spirit as one of the most important of civic responsibilities.

"This is a responsibility shared by all. It is the willingness, mark you, to do the work and contribute something, rather than the amount given, which determines the good citizen. The bricklayer with his contribution of $1; the broker with his $50 and the banker with his $500 may each be actuated by the same impulse of public duty and public spirit and deserve the same appreciation of his fellow citizens.

"Pitiable is the miserly rich man, who watches his city grow and his fortune increase from dollars to hundreds and from hundreds to tens of thousands, largely through the progressive efforts of others, and who is unwilling to lend a helping hand to any public enterprise. Such a man is a civic loser. He is useless to himself and the community and is liable to infect others with his loathsome habits.

"That city is most progressive whose citizens yield quickest to the impulse to push to completion any undertaking for the public good."

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Mrs. Lando has our thanks for four volumes of stories for boys.

The library broke its circulation record the first of the week by issuing 98 volumes in one day. The previous record was 91.

Reports from all the state departments and state institutions for 1910 have just been received and are ready for use. The report of the Library Commission shows that Marshfield library already stands ninth in size among the free public libraries of Oregon, being followed by Dallas, Medford, Newberg, Albany and eleven other towns. The public is invited to read the paragraphs on "Library Progress" of the different cities and towns of the state.

It seems that what many Marshfield readers should endeavor to do next, is to develop a taste for a little non-fiction.

Taylor officiating in the presence of the choir of the Presbyterian church. The members of the choir were not aware until the bride and groom were declared husband and wife that they were at a real wedding instead of choir practice. The groom is one of Myrtle Point's successful business men and the bride the leader of the millinery business of this section and are well-known and are among the popular set of Myrtle Point. After due congratulations a very dainty repast was served that had been prepared by the bride herself. After February 1, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lewellen will be at home to greet their many friends.

AT THE THEATRE.

From all reports the company that will soon make their debut in Marshfield is an excellent one.

Miss Auda Due, who has been a recognized leading woman on the coast for a good many years, will head the company.

Mr. Harry Hollingsworth will be seen in leads opposite Miss Due. Mr. Hollingsworth like Miss Due is well recognized on the coast. Together they make an excellent team, and understand each other's methods, always giving smooth performances.

Mr. Pietro Sasso will be seen in the heavy roles and in the villainous line he is right at home. He has just completed a fifteen-weeks engagement at Burbank theatre in Los Angeles.

There are few comedians that can surpass Mr. Raymond W. Horton in this part of the country. Mr. Horton is the man who makes the people laugh and naturally Mr. Bernell has secured the best money could get.

Other members of the company will be reviewed later, carpenters and electricians are working hard for the opening.

WAGON ROAD IS IN BAD SHAPE

Mail From North Delayed By Flood—Contractor Barnard Scores Old Road.

That the old Coos Bay wagon road is getting the worst of the deal is the inference of a letter received by Postmaster Curtis this morning from C. P. Barnard, the mail contractor. Mr. Barnard wrote that owing to the flood in the Willamette valley, no mail had been received from the north since 4 o'clock in the morning of January 18. He says this will result in piling up so much on him that he cannot get pack horses enough to get it through promptly.

Regarding the conditions on the road and the work being done, Mr. Barnard writes as follows:

"I note that on the 12, 13 and 14 no mail arrived from Roseburg, but the mail should have been carried between Sitkum and Marshfield and between Marshfield and Empire regardless of failure to get over the mountain, but I will be over before the month is out and can get the data then.

"Coos county only opened a poor pack trail after the storm instead of clearing the road for a wagon as they did on the Myrtle Point road.

"I understand the supervisor on the mountain said he would put the mail off of the old road, and he will make good unless the road is opened for wagons by Saturday, as the inspector will be here then and says they will not have the mail carried on horses over this road when it can be carried by wagon on the Myrtle Point line, cannot give good service, mail is too heavy.

"I do not know as the supervisor said any such thing, but do know that the road is better today, if it was cleared out from Reston to Dora, than it is from Olalla to Remote, and we are running the wagons over there all the time, were hung up a couple of days on account of timber during the storm, and with the same energy on this road would not have missed more than three trips with wagon, snow was a little deeper over here.

"I would not like to see the mail changed but only took such a schedule with the understanding that those new grades, which were already made would be planked, and the Canyon kept open and passable, neither of these have been done.

"Marshfield has a vital interest in this mail service and seems to want a good road, but Douglas county has done more actual work since last July between Looking Glass and the county line, than Coos county has on all the road between the county line and Sumner, excepting of course the cut at Brewster grade which does not effect the mail service.

"There is probably five miles of road between Sitkum and Sumner that should be planked, the most of it was ready for the plank when I went over the road last spring, supposed there was no question about their planking that, but they were not even going to finish Cherry creek hill for which the contract was let, but understand the tax payers insisted on its being done.

"I do not think there was a day's work done in the Canyon after the contract was let until after winter set in, has been one man part of the time this winter, can do nothing alone, the money is thrown away, the day Mr. McLata came over happened to be two men sent up to blast out a big rock which we could not get around, that is all they did.

Yours respectfully, C. P. BARNARD.

HOLD MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Chamber of Commerce Wants Larger Attendance to Act On Various Matters.

At a meeting at the Marshfield Chamber of Commerce last night, a number of matters were taken up. Owing to a rather small attendance and the importance of some of the propositions, it was decided to call a general meeting to be held next Monday evening to discuss some of the matters and take final action on them.

Among the matters to come up Monday night will be to determine what action the Chamber of Commerce should take on the Employers' Liability law, action of resolutions regarding the improvement of the harbor and bar and several other matters.

Last night, telegrams were ordered sent to the Oregon delegation in Congress to exert their influence to secure the Panama Canal Exposition for San Francisco when the matter comes before Congress as a whole.

A resolution urging the Oregon legislature to make an appropriation for the maintenance of the Oregon Naval Reserves was ordered prepared and sent to the representatives at Salem.

Resolutions indorsing the bill appropriating $50,000 per year to assist in fighting Oregon forest fires were ordered sent to the members of the legislature at Salem.

The secretary was instructed to send $125 to the Rivers and Harbors Congress for its maintenance.

Last night the question was raised as what the resolution was that was adopted relative to the bar improvement at the last meeting. Some had understood it to be that the bar dredge be accepted and indorsed and that an appropriation be asked to repair the jetty in connection with it. Claude Nashburg who seconded the motion said that it did not indorse the bar dredge and he wanted it corrected. C. F. McKnight said it should be corrected.

Henry Sengstacken who made the motion thought that he made it to include the acceptance and indorsement of the bar dredge and for the request for an appropriation for the jetty, the way The Times printed it. Judge Coke and others at the meeting understood it that way. However, the secretary's minutes show the motion as put by Chairman McKnight did not include the indorsement of the bar dredge. Upon motion by C. C. Going, resolutions were ordered prepared to be acted upon at a general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and forwarded to the engineers and congressmen making Coos Bay's attitude on the bar improvement clear.

The committee appointed some time ago to secure subscriptions for the uniforms for the Coos Bay Naval Reserves were requested to get busy and secure eight more uniforms. J. W. Bennett, J. H. Flanagan, Wm. Grimes, J. V. Smeaton, I. S. Smith and E. E. Straw were named as a committee to welcome the delegation of Portland business men coming on the Anvil.

Summer End of the Line.

E. N. Harry, another road supervisor on the old Coos Bay wagon road in a letter to Judge Hall, denies Barnard's claims. He says that the road is being kept up as well as possible and much better in fact than ever was. He says he has a foreman putting in corduroy. He claims he has had all the men at work could be used to advantage clearing the road since the storm.

Deny the Charges.

Jas. Stock, a road supervisor, a statement to the Chamber of Commerce last night, denied the charges of Contractor Barnard that the road was not kept up. He said that Barnard used a narrow tire which dug up the road. He said that at a three-inch tire should be used, also claimed that although the carriers had to use six horses to haul the mail to the Coos county line, it had to use only three on this road for a ways and only two on other.
