

"BUSINESS IS BUSINESS"

Not always. The Almighty Dollar is apt to be the goal. "Business is (honest) business" but even that phrase is subject to argument. The hard fisted business man measures honesty from his own view point—and the man who owes him—shudders. "Business is (real) business," when one's own personality is thrown into it; when it is watched and guided and strengthened as the child is directed and developed; when strictness of service becomes discipline; when character building is in progress; when worth and quality become foremost incentives; when sentiment centers into the splendid scheme to make business grow.

Sentiment in business is likened to those bright reliefs in a lecture. Who wants to listen to a prosaic discourse? And who takes pride in being a customer where gracious warmth is lacking?

Parasites feed on slow-going, slow-growing frigid business. The warm sunshine of human nature destroys the parasite. Customers are human beings—who love the clear, refreshing atmosphere. And advertising is the greeting, the whole-souled hand shake of growing business. Which principles underlie the growing business of this store.

At the present writing our store is undergoing a thorough renovation.—More room is being added, new fixtures and other conveniences are being supplied preparatory to the reception of New Spring Merchandise which from this day on will be arriving daily. Announcements will be made later which will be of interest.

BLAMES GAME HOGS.

The Roseburg News says: "All this hubbub regarding the destruction of deer by the wild animals in the mountains, and if the slaughter is not stopped deer will become exterminated, is without foundation. When the white man first settled the West, and the East also, deer, antelope, moose, elk and all manner of big game abounded in the mountains and on the prairies of the country. There were also plenty of bear, cougar, panthers, and wolves, and although these animals had roamed the land together for ages, with no bounty on the scalps of the latter, there was no dearth of good hunting and plenty of game that the early settler used for food. Since the white man has become numerous, killing game in all seasons without regard for the natural increase, and packs of dogs have been allowed to hunt at will in the mountains, the big game that once infested the hills and valleys of the West is rapidly decreasing. While it is well enough to place a bounty on the scalp of predatory animals, it would be much wiser for the solons at Salem to place a larger bounty on the scalp of any dog found running deer. It would also be wisdom to increase the fine for killing deer out of season, or for killing female deer, and to make the fine emphatic by a good stiff prison sentence. It is the white man and his dogs who is responsible for the rapid decrease of the deer and elk in the mountains, and not, as many would have us believe, the few wolves, cougar, and panther that are occasionally seen in the wilds."

DEEP SEA FISHERIES.

Two Bandon men will leave, February 1, on a cruise west of Cape Blanco to search for halibut banks which are supposed, to exist in that vicinity. While halibut have been taken in small numbers at a dozen places off the Oregon coast, no definite attempt has ever been made to locate their breeding grounds, and if "banks" of similar importance to those off Northern British Columbia can be found in this vicinity, a new and promising industry will be added to the many that are already increasing the wealth of the Oregonians. Now that Portland has become the greatest railroad center on the Pacific coast, our opportunities for distributing sea food are superior to those of any other port, and the market for fish and other sea foods could be enlarged indefinitely.

Halibut has, perhaps attracted more attention than any other of the Pacific coast food fishes, but right off the Oregon coast, there are practically unlimited quantities of ling cod, redfish, flounders, porgies, herring and other palatable fish which would find a ready market throughout the Pacific Northwest and far into the Rocky Mountain country.

Development of resources on land has been so highly remunerative in this state that little attention has been paid to our deep sea resources, but in the future they are destined to attract much more.—Oregonian.

Sedentary habits, lack of outdoor exercise, insufficient mastication of food, constipation, a torpid liver, worry and anxiety, are the most common causes of stomach troubles. Correct your habits and take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be well again. For sale by all dealers.

BEST HEN HAS SHORT TOE NAILS

Professor Rice Says Chicken That Digs Most Lays Most Eggs.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 31.—Any person thinking of going into the poultry business, even on the backyard scale, should pick chickens with short toe nails to start with. Professor J. F. Rice, Cornell university poultry expert, told the farmers gathered here that if they did that they would be sure to get thrifty chickens that would give them an egg for breakfast almost every morning. These chickens have short toe nails, he says, from continuous scratching for food, and a chicken that is constantly scratching for food is sure to be industrious when it comes to laying eggs.

The average hen of old time laid only eighteen eggs a year, Professor Rice said, while the modern hen of pure breeding will lay from 100 to 200 annually.

ALONG THE WATERFRONT.

The Anvil did not stop at Coos Bay on its initial trip to the various Oregon coast points. The reason for not coming in here is not known. She sailed from Bandon for Portland Sunday.

According to marine reports from Bandon, the Liebe sailed from there for San Pedro Sunday and the Ottilie and Fjord arrived in from San Francisco.
