WITH THE TOAST AND TEA
GOOD EVENING.
 To be only an admirer is not to be a friend of a human being. Human nature wants something more, and our perceptions are diseased when we dress up a human being in the attributes of divinity. He is our friend who loves more than admires us, and would aid us in our great work.—William Ellery Channing.

"THOU HAST THY MUSIC, TOO."
(After Swinburne.)
 (We hear a great deal of the spring poet, but where is the poet of autumn?)—Exchange.
 In the days when I nursed a desire to have my poetical fling, I would hiss with the help of my lyre
 Of the deeds that are done in the spring,
 Then I sang of the skies and their glories,
 Till I saw I had sung them enough.
 So I strummed a few strains to Dolores,
 And similar stuff.

How I joyed in my jests and my rhythms!
 How I varied the vim of my verse!
 And I said I shall make money with 'em,
 And the press shall replenish my purse.
 With a fire after fame in my bosom,
 I invited some papers to bid
 For the right to retain 'em and use 'em;
 But nobody did.
 Then I turned my attention to summer,
 And sang of the wine that is red,
 Of the honey that comes from the hummer,
 And whatever came into my head.
 And I sang of the seas that are sunny;
 But although I had gotten the knack
 Of writing of rhymes that are funny,
 They always came back.

Yet I cannot construe my rejections.
 As a hint to my manifold muse
 To refrain from those soulful selections
 Of songs that I love to let loose.
 And if autumn's in need or a poet
 To laugh on the lyre or to sob
 (Though I needn't say "it" for I know it),
 I'm on for the job.

We don't care much if we are poor; a rich man never has time to enjoy his money.

The agricultural department has sent out the more or less interesting information that the green beetle will eat from twenty-five to thirty caterpillars a day. For almost anybody but the green beetle that would look like a ticklish proposition.

A "model young man" who is looking for a wife has canvassed St. Louis, Pittsburg, and Warren, O., in vain and is now looking over Cleveland's assortment of eligible girls. The poor fellow will probably never know how much trouble he might have saved by coming to Coos Bay in the first place.

Among the various incidents which occurred on the trip down the Bay the other day was one in which Major Morrow mentioned the fact that in Japan a certain light house was maintained which could only be reached twice a year and that it was customary to put two men on the light and they almost invariably found that at the end of each six months, one of the two was dead and the remaining one was insane. A. H. Powers suggested that Henry Sengstacken and J. W. Bennett be given the job the next time to see which would be dead and which would be insane at the end of the period. Bennett said he was willing and that he believed that what small change he would have, at the end of the six months would belong to Sengstacken and he would take his chances as to who would be dead or insane. I. S. Kaufman was present and said it was doubtful as to who would own the money at the end of the six months would belong to third man if he should happen to accompany the two.

Is Moving.—F. S. Dow is today moving into his new offices in the Merchant building on Front street which was recently vacated by the First National Bank.

Is Better.—Mrs. F. M. Marhofer who underwent an operation at Mercy hospital a few days ago is getting along fine and it is expected that she will be able to return to their home at Bay City in a day or two.

Steal Butter.—Yesterday someone stole a box containing twenty-eight squares of butter consigned to F. M. Marhofer of Bay City from the dock near the Java Coffee House. Mr. Marhofer has secured strong evidence as to their identity and there is likely to be something doing about it in a day or two.

No Raise on Booze.—Owing to some of the Marshfield saloon men balking on the proposed increase in the price of drinks, the advance did not take effect today as was proposed. It is being dispensed at the same old price although some of the dealers say that it will be advanced in the near future.

Go to Salem.—There will be an exodus of Coos county attorneys to Salem the last of the week to argue local cases before the Oregon Supreme Court. Among those who will go are John D. Goss, J. W. Bennett, C. R. Peck, Judge Hall, A. S. Hammond of Coquille, L. A. Liljeqvist of Coquille and C. A. Sehlbrede.

Cases Sent Back.—In the case of Foster vs. the Coos Bay Gas and Electric Company, an action for damages for personal injuries, the federal court at Portland has remitted it for trial in the circuit court. The case was begun a couple of years ago but the defendants sought to have it transferred to the federal court.

Strike Seep Oil.—A Marshfield man has received a letter from a member of the Mesocene Oil company which is drilling for oil near Bandon in which it is stated that last Friday at a depth of over 1,000 feet, they struck considerable seep oil, a crude form of petroleum. He expressed confidence that they would strike oil when they are down a hundred feet or so more.

Represented at Portland.—The Coos Bay Fruit Growers association was represented at the meeting of the fruit growers of the northwest at Portland last week by C. F. McKnight. Mr. McKnight was in Portland on other business and agreed with President Hall-Lewis to attend the sessions for the benefit of the local men. He was one of a group of the prominent fruit growers whose picture was printed in a Portland paper the other day.

DEALS WITH HILL.
 Major L. D. Kinney is reported to have written a letter to some of his friends on Coos Bay saying that he is personally negotiating with Louis W. Hill or the Hill railways at Portland for the sale of his Coos Bay holdings to them.

WIRING VIEW IS EXPRESSED

G. W. Kaufman Says That All Reputable Insurance Merit Favor Improving.

Editor Times:
 It would be interesting to know what "insurance men," or what kind of insurance men, were referred to by Electrical Inspector Tribbey in your interview with him yesterday. It is a fact that no single influence has done more to educate the people in fire preventing methods of construction and equipment than the fire insurance companies, and that each advance in this line has been promptly met with corresponding reductions in rates.
 Every agent who knows his business, and is fairly intelligent, not to say conscientious, is anxious to advance every means of reducing the fire risk in his city; first, because he knows that the loss of capital by fire hurts the business of his community; second, because he wishes to reduce the losses of his companies as much as possible, and third, because any reduction in rates (and commissions) is balanced by the larger amount of business he is able to write under lower charges.

Insurance companies prefer to write the low rated risks. There is more profit in them. The companies are just as anxious to get premiums as the agents are to get commissions. Yet very many risks are declined, at high rates, because of poor construction or improper equipment against fires, while the same risks are accepted, at lower rates, when their defects are remedied to the extent of making them reasonable fire risks.

Inspector Tribbey is doing efficient and commendable work, and has perhaps received more assistance from the insurance men than he is aware of. He should be earnestly supported and assisted by every legitimate insurance agent in lessening the fire hazard in Marshfield.
 Any agent who does not cooperate with him does not deserve the business of either his company or his clients.
 G. W. KAUFMAN,
