Life is growin' brighter
Every day;
Souls are growin' whiter
Every day.
Birds are singin' sweeter,
Girls are lookin' neater,
Life, it grows completer
Every day.

Keep your song a-goin'
Every day;
Keep your music flowin'
Every day.
Cast off sad repinin',
Shine the murky lulin',
Keep the sun a-shinin'
Every day.

THE MOTHER who stays young with her children is doing the world an infinite amount of good, says Katherine Kip. The retention of the youthful spirit is something other women might well envy because it brings a happiness nothing else can.

The mother who does this can appreciate her children's outlook upon life and help them to form their careers—just the aid most young people need but rarely get. The perfect sympathy thus established will last through life and after the mother is gone will be the greatest influence in her child's life.

Mothers lament because they early lose control of their children, but it is rarely the mother who stays young with her children who is called upon to regret in this wise.

There is scarcely a prettier sight in the world than that of a mother and daughter living in perfect companionship with each other. The daughter gets a very great deal of inspiration from such close living and the mother certainly derives a great deal of comfort from it.

It may be a sacrifice in the beginning for a mother to give up her own predilections to enter into the amusements and the ambitions of her daughter, but there comes a time when she finds that it has been worth all it has cost and that it has been eminently worth while. The daughter who grows up with the idea that mother is her best friend, who finds it as natural as anything in the world to include her mother in her calculations, gets a harmony that is restful and invigorating.

When the time comes that only one travels the road of life where but a little while before there were two, there is the sweet consolation that one has lived the true measure of life. If it is the mother who is called first she has given the daughter an experience that shall be her shield through all the worries and temptations of the after years.

But even before that time comes often when she reaches a point in life's road where there is only an interrogation point instead of direction, she will stop and ask herself what mother would advise under the circumstances. And by her knowledge of mother's thoughts on just these things she is able to make the right decision.

It isn't the daughter who grows away from the mother as often as it is the mother who grows away from the daughter. This is particularly likely to happen where the mother has interests outside the home. She leaves her growing daughter too much to the society of others, and often to foreign influences. Some day she awakens to find herself separated as far from her child as if they dwelt at the opposite poles.

The companionable mother gets her daughter's confidence and holds it through the critical years. She is able to discriminate between the young people with whom her child is thrown into association and she is able to surround her with just the right type of companions to keep her clean and wholesome. Surely the undertaking is well worth while.

Mr. and Mrs. K. V. Kruse of North Bend this week announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Bertha, to Dr. Geo. A. Caphey of Portland. The nuptials will take place about the middle of March. Miss Kruse is one of the most charming of Coos Bay's young women and Dr. Caphey is a prominent young physician of Portland. The approaching marriage is the culmination of a romance beginning soon after Miss Kruse entered upon a course as trained nurse in a Portland hospital where she and her husband-to-be met.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Parsons are planning to leave soon for an extended visit at their old home near Kansas City and at other points of interest in the middle west. They will be absent several weeks.

The following from the Portland Journal is handsome compliment to leading women's club of Marshfield:

"While it is too early to even approximate the returns from scholarship loan fund day, it is safe to say that the fund will be increased by a handsome sum total. Many of the towns have sent word that they either had or were giving, entertainments and the proceeds would be forwarded as soon as the returns were all in. To the Progress club of Marshfield is due the honor, this year, of being the first to send a remittance. It is not always convenient for clubs to hold their benefit on the exact date, and while an effort is made to have the last Wednesday of January strictly observed, for the benefit that comes from united action, yet the impossible is never expected, and the first to send in their donation is always looked upon as the forerunner of what is to come. It is odd, however, that one of the farthest away clubs, and one that is not privileged often to come in personal touch with the federation when in convention, should respond so promptly, but it is only another evidence of the growing interest in this work and the broadness of its scope."

Miss Jessie Chase is entertaining a number of friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bennett this afternoon. Bridge is the diversion.

The annual banquet of the Five Hundred club was held Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sherwood, about 40 people enjoying the elegant spread and the social time following. After the banquet the evening was spent in playing five hundred, Mrs. O. C. Sanford winning the ladies first prize, a cut glass water bottle. Mr. D. D. Pierce won the first prize for gentlemen, a set of military brushes, and Mr. O. C. Sanford won the consolation. Punch was served during the progress of the game. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Evland, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lamb, Mr. and Mrs.
