LOGGED-OFF LANDS.

JAMES J. HILL once made the statement, and proved its accuracy with figures, that a quarter section of good timberland in Oregon or Washington would produce as much tonnage for a railroad as the same amount of land sown to wheat would produce in 160 years. As the loggers of the Pacific Northwest are daily removing the timber from several square miles of land, the importance of immediately getting this denuded forest land into shape so it may continue to produce traffic is very great. A number of companies have been formed in Oregon and Washington for the express purpose of clearing off these logged-off lands and placing them in condition for crop-producing. In Southwestern Washington, one company alone is said to have in its possession 20,000 acres of logged-off lands and will immediately begin clearing and placing them on the market.

For decades, logged-off lands have been regarded as practically worthless. The Pacific Northwest has had, up to the present time such rich areas of more easily cleared and irrigated land that the merits of logged-off lands have never been appreciated. Many of the great forests that were laid low by the loggers grew out of wonderfully rich soil. The value of such tracts for agricultural purposes is beginning to be understood. Some of the land may be more valuable for reforestation purposes than it is for agriculture, but there are in the aggregate several hundred thousand acres of good agricultural land that can be reclaimed by the methods followed by the companies recently organized for the purpose. When all of this land comes into a productive stage it will add greatly to the wealth of the country. It may be many years before it will produce as much tonnage for the railroads as they received when the timber was removed, but it will give them a steadily increasing volume of traffic of another class.

TO FORCE VOTE.

Senator Borah of Idaho Takes Stand On Resolution.
(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14.—Senator Borah gave notice that Thursday he was asked by the Senate to sit continuously until the resolution for the popular election of senators is disposed of. The notice followed the refusal of Senator Heyburn to permit a vote Friday. Night sessions are probable.
