

MANY LAWS ON GAME PASSED

Oregon Legislature Enacted Bills Affecting Hunting In This State.

SALEM, Ore., Feb. 20.—No less than 10 bills dealing with various kinds of game came up for consideration in the Senate and these covered a wide range. They ranged from the protection of lobsters (those inhabiting waters) to bird refuges.

First, the Senate passed a bill to establish refuges for birds; this provides that the governor can set aside lands near state grounds for bird refuges and that county courts can lease tracts of land for the refuge of wild animals and birds. These reserves are to be posted and have heavy penalty provided for those invading them on missions of slaughter. Oliver wanted to know how the birds would be advised of these cities of refuge, and Bean explained that the birds quickly realize when there is a patch of ground which is safe and cited the preserves of an Irishman near Eugene, where the birds fly whenever they are pursued and where the birds on the tract are almost perfectly tame. The bill is fathered by the Audubon Society.

Then there was a bill which provided that fur-bearing animals may be paid for by the counties and the pelt still be left for commercial purposes. This is arranged for in case of fur-bearing animals by the county clerk punching holes in the scalp and still leaving the remainder of the pelt intact.

As for the protection of lobsters, that bill passed without a dissenting voice, the lawmakers evidently realizing the need for protection and security.

The duck law was changed so that not more than 25 ducks may be shot in one day, as is the case now, but the amendment prevents having more than that number in a hunter's possession so that a good hunter cannot stuff off his extra shoot on a poor hunter when questions are asked.

Dolly Varden trout were placed under the ban, the speckled beauties being declared as destructive as German carp and about as worthless. The Dolly Vardens were charged with destroying the mountain trout and salmon eggs, and they did not have a friend in the Senate.

Heretofore the law has prohibited shooting ducks from sinkboats, skiffs and power boats on the mbia River and Coos Bay, but provision against this has been added. This is the only change in law, but it is of great importance to duck hunters, who have been afflicted from using rowboats in rearing for ducks.

In Union and Wallowa counties non-residents must pay a license of $50 a season for hunting deer, and this affects the Indians, who swarm into those counties and slaughter the deer. The game committee has stood pat on reducing the number of buck deer a hunter can kill from five to three in a season.

A new Fish and Game Commission bill was adopted, this being one of the Audubon Society bills. The bill authorizes the governor to appoint four commissioners, three four to appoint the fifth, and these five are to select the state game and fish wardens and distribute the game fund. It takes the wardens from politics and will revolutionize game matters in Oregon in many respects.

Repeated efforts have been made to declare a closed season for Chinese pheasants for two years, but these have failed, although the West Side of the Willamette Valley appeared to be a unit. The Lane county delegation opposes the measure. Jackson and Coos counties have settled the question by declaring closed seasons in those counties. A bill to hunt pheasants with dogs failed.

MILLER IS ILL OF PARESIS

"POET OF THE SIERRAS" NOT EXPECTED TO RECOVER AT SAN FRANCISCO—MIND AND BODY AFFECTED.

That Joaquin Miller cannot recover is the news that comes from San Francisco. Much interest is felt in him here because of considerable time he spent on the Bay, being a relative of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hilborn of Millleoma. Three years ago this spring he visited here.

Concerning his illness, a San Francisco paper says:

"Living over again in his delirium the scenes of his boyhood days when he saw the Golden West in the beginning of its making, Joaquin Miller, the famous old 'Poet of the Sierras' lies at the Fabiola hospital very near to death.

"Though the aged bard has turned back the clock a half century in his fever dreams, it is believed it will soon strike the last hour for him. It is believed that when he once more returns to 'The Heights' it will be to take the long rest on the hillside by the mother who is laid there.

"It is a strange and pitiful sight to see the old man with his long white beard and white hair, his pain-wracked face and lined hands, lying on the white cover and to listen to the rambling of a mind that believes it dwells in a body of strength and youth.

"The brother of the poet, George Melvin Miller of Eugene, Ore., is at his bedside. His grandson, Aloysius McCormick, is also with him, and his daughter, Juanita Miller, is on her way from New York, hurrying to the sick man.

"Dr. H. M. Sutherland, the house physician at the hospital, has made the statement that paresis of the body and brain has set in, and that even if there is a slight chance for life, he would never regain the power of mind that formerly was his. "He has made all arrangements for his own funeral should death come soon. He has ordered that his body be burned on a funeral pyre at the top of the hill in back of his home and that the ashes be collected and buried in a spot near there."

Reduction From Willamette Valley to San Francisco Declared Invalid.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20.—A transportation rate is "not unjust and unreasonable" within the meaning of the interstate commerce laws merely because it may be announced inequitable, according to a decision pronounced today by the Supreme Court of the United States, the court holding invalid the Interstate Commerce Commission order reducing rates on lumber on from the Willamette valley to San Francisco.
