Little Talks on Advertising

TALK No. 7

HARDWARE MEN SHOULD ADVERTISE.

"Only by advertising in the local newspapers and by intelligent application of the things learned here," said President S. R. Miles in his chalk talk before the Iowa Retail Hardware association, "can the merchant in the town expect to gain success. It is not enough merely to understand the principles of good salesmanship and management, but the merchant must apply these principles to his own conditions, and he can do this only through exhaustive study."

LUMBERMEN SHOULD ADVERTISE

W. G. Weart, formerly of Cherokee, now of Cedar Falls, president of the Central Iowa Retail Lumbermen's association, in session at Des Moines, in his annual address advised the lumbermen to use the newspapers for advertising. He recommended the "use of printer's ink as a panacea" for "saving ourselves from the mail order competition." "There are many kinds of advertising," said Mr. Weart. "For myself, I divide them into three classes: Newspaper, personal letter, and novelty advertising. If you have a newspaper that is read by your trade, I believe there is no better medium through which to reach them than in this manner."

GREAT DEPTH MOTHER LOVE

the physicians. The future years, life, home—these held nothing in promise for her without a baby, her own baby, to love. There was a long argument between the woman and the learned physicians, and it ended as it began, with the woman unconvinced and more determined than before to realize the dream of her existence, her life's one greatest hope. She asked the meaning and explanation of that most wonderful operation known to surgical science as the Caesarian section, and if its performance would remove the obstacles that nature had placed in the way of the fulfillment of her heart's desire. The physician told her it would—if she survived it. But, he pointed out, the danger was great; the records showed that up to a few years ago, even among the most advanced scientists of England, the death rate following this operation was estimated at more than 99 per cent, and that in America, until quite recent times, the mortality was so high that the operation was avoided at any cost. Her previous experiences in bearing children was a discouraging fact to be considered. All these and many other facts were urged upon her, but when all had been told she said, with a determination that forbade further argument, that her mind was made up and that she was ready and willing to assume the risk. And she did. She placed herself under the care of doctors who declare the case one of the most interesting and most replete with heart interest of any that ever came under their notice.

Baby Life Repays All.

That is the story of the determination that brought the little baby girl into the world. The long months of suffering and anxiety—but never a moment of doubt—the thrilling hour when doctors and nurses performed their unusual offices, the tender soil-itude of the anxious husband, the thousand and one things that strengthened the bond of love between them, and all that ended with the moment of returning consciousness after the operation was over and she felt the thrill of a soft warm cheek against her own and the clutch of a tiny hand at her throat—these things go to form another story, one of the finest ever told.

"I never felt fear, even when contemplating the dangers that I knew I had to face," said Mrs. Gates. "I faced them all knowingly and willingly, and I never regretted the determination that was in my heart. I am proud of our baby—so very proud—and love her so much that all I have gone through for her sake seems little to me. There was never another in the world so sweet, and I think God has been good to me. I have great hopes for baby, and if I am spared to bring her to honored and useful womanhood I shall have no more to ask or want."

Likened Unto a Madonna.

And every night a big, happy man mounts the stairs of Hope Hospital, hurries through the long hall, stops to listen a moment at the door of "Her" room, then tiptoes across the bare floor and—just stands and looks, and looks, first at his little girl and then at his wife. At that moment they seem to be in the presence of a great mystery, something that awes and holds then spellbound. They are not sentimental, certainly not demonstrative, but always, when they meet thus in the hour that marks the close of the day, their hands clasp above the head of their darling girl, their eyes fill with tears of joy and gratitude and their souls commune in a rapture of joy that is given few mortals to know.

Wonderful Surgical Skill.

So far as known, the operation which gave little Miss Gates her safe introduction to the great world is the third of its kind to be performed in the Northwest States. One of these was in Portland, a few years ago, when the lives of twin girls were saved. The other was at a hospital in Walla Walla a year or so ago. But these were steps taken to save a woman's life, as a last resort. The first to be recorded was in 1610, in Europe. Caesar was given birth in

Mysterious Mr. Weyerhaeuser

Little Known of the Billionaire Lumberman Who Is Reported Ill in Pasadena, California.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Mar. 2.—Although Frederick Weyerhaeuser, the billionaire lumberman who is reported ill at Pasadena, California, has made his home at St. Paul for many years he is almost as little known to the people of this city as to the public in general. And this despite the fact that he is believed to be the richest man in the United States, richer probably by some millions of dollars than John D. Rockefeller, whose name is synonymous for riches in almost every part of the civilized world. Weyerhaeuser, with his timber land possessions aggregating 30,000,000 acres, is said to be worth close to $1,250,000,000, which at the present rate of advance in lumber is increasing by leaps and bounds.

The personality of Frederick Weyerhaeuser is little known. He is a recluse and his own business associates have never shared his secrets. His home life in this city is quiet and simple. Even to those who know him best he is a living puzzle, an enigma, a mystery.

Born at Neldersauheim, a hamlet of Southern Germany, in 1834, he worked as a farm laborer until his eighteenth year, when he made up his mind to seek his fortune in a land where freedom played a more prominent part than it did in south Germany at that time. So in 1852, accompanied by his mother and sister, he crossed the ocean.

Settling first in Erie, Pennsylvania, he found work in a brewery, but migrated four years later to Little Rock, Illinois, where he got employment at $1 a day piling slabs in a sawmill. In a little more than a year he owned the mill. In a fellow-worker at the mill, F. C. A. Denckman, Weyerhaeuser found a fellow-countryman, destined in after years to be a close ally in all his schemes and enterprises. Together they bought the other men out of the business, and soon found themselves free of debt with enough capital to enable them to strike out with boldness and confidence.

From the time he acquired his first sawmill until the present the life of Mr. Weyerhaeuser has been a slow, unceasing, steady grind of buying timber cheap, selling it at a profit, then acquiring still larger tracts. He first visited Wisconsin and Minnesota, where he discovered lands rich in timber, that could be purchased for a few cents per acre. He and his partner bought the lands. Sawmills were constructed, and money began to roll in fast.

Mr. Weyerhaeuser, as the leading spirit in the partnership, created the little known and mysterious "Weyerhaeuser syndicate," which soon was acknowledged by the lumber world to be the most powerful factor in the trade. The Mississippi river boom and logging company, of which he was elected president in the early eighties, has always been the base of his known transactions.

Master of the marvellous forests in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and in Washington and other states in the far northwest, Weyerhaeuser in time came to control most of the logging done on the Mississippi. He was able to fix the price of logs, the price of handling them on the rivers, the price of sawing them, and the price of the finished product.

And in all this, he shunned publicity like the grand lama of Tibet. Though possessed apparently of an unquenchable ambition, he has never made a display of his wealth. The simple life of their earlier days has satisfied him and his family. He has never cared for yachts, automobiles, fast horses and other luxuries common to the millionaire class. His four sons all received excellent educations, but were obliged to work in the lumber camps and go through the mills, as their father had done before them.

TO PUT BOATS ON THIS RUN

A. F. Estabrook Figuring On Coos Bay and San Francisco Business.

A. F. Estabrook of the A. F. Estabrook and company, is figuring on putting the steamers Bandon and Field on the San Francisco and Coos Bay run, according to a report in circulation here today. Mr. Estabrook is said to have taken the matter up with some local men and a definite announcement of whether or not the deal goes through will probably be made in a day or two.

The Bandon and Field are now on the Bandon-San Francisco run, and it is presumed that Mr. Estabrook's plans are to have the steamers stop at Bandon en route.

The two vessels have been carrying lumber to San Francisco besides the regular freight and passenger business and have frequently stopped at Coos Bay to take lumber from here.

In this manner, after his mother had died, and the belief is general that the operation is named in honor of him. This belief is erroneous. The title comes from the Latin, caeso matris utero. The records do not show another case to have existed where a woman has deliberately and with fearless determination faced the trials and dangers of pregnancy, knowing that when the time came for her child to be born she would have to face the most delicate of surgical operations known to science in order that the lives of herself and her child might be saved. Mrs. Gates did this, and she says that she is repaid a thousandfold. The recovery of the patient has been even more rapid than anticipated and was in every way deeply gratifying. She will return to her home in a few days more, to live out her happy dream, long unfulfilled.

D. E. COOLEY PASSES AWAY

Former Marshfield Man Succumbs to Long Illness at Modesto, Cal.

J. E. Cooley received a telegram this morning announcing the death of his brother Dorence E. Cooley, at Modesto, Cal., yesterday morning. Mr. Cooley had been ill for some time and was taken from here to California a few months ago in hopes that the change in climate would be beneficial to him.

A sad phase of his passing was that his aged mother, who left Marshfield last week and caught a steamer from Bandon when word was received that he had taken a turn for the worse arrived there a few hours too late to see her son alive. Another brother of the deceased reached Modesto yesterday soon after death occurred.

Mr. Cooley resided in Marshfield for some time and for a time was associated in the cleaning and pressing business with Mr. Falkner here. He was about twenty-two years old and leaves a wife and baby.

The funeral will be held in Modesto Friday.

Eczema Cure a Beauty Wash

Although D. D. D. Prescription has been recognized for years as the one remedy for Eczema, Psoriasis, and all other forms of skin diseases, it is now known that there is no other wash, even those used by the beauty specialists, that can compare with this mild liquid for cleansing the skin of pimples, blackheads, rash, and all similar skin affections.

For this reason alone, a bottle of D. D. D. should be kept on hand in every household. A trial 25c bottle will show you the merits of this great remedy as a complexion wash.

D. D. D. seems to remove the cause, whatever the trouble may be, cleansing the skin, and leaving it as soft, as smooth and clear as that of a healthy child.
