BIG BOXING CARNIVAL IN MARSHFIELD SATURDAY NIGHT

Next Saturday night, March 25, one of the best boxing carnivals that has ever been pulled off on Coos Bay has been scheduled by John Herron to take place at the Marshfield Skating rink. Jean West of Portland and Guy Lee of San Francisco are the top-drawers for a twenty-round go and "Pud" Nosler and Art Fish of Coquille are slated for an eight-round go.

West is one of the best glove artists that Portland has ever turned out. For the last few years he has been putting it over on the other aspirants for pugilistic honors in the Pacific Northwest.

Lee is not so well known on the Bay but has established quite a reputation for himself in and around San Francisco. He has fought ten-round draws with men of Abe Attell's class.

Both were in fairly good condition when they reached here but are training hard for next Saturday night's bout.

Tickets for the fight are now on sale at the Bell Cord and a number of the best seats have already been taken. A special train is being arranged to bring over the fans from the Coquille valley who are especially anxious to see the go between "Pud" Nosler and Art Fish, both residents of the valley, who have met several times, but neither of whom has gained a decisive victory over the other.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday afternoons, special boxing exhibitions will be given free at the training quarters in North Bend and all who like to see the clever work with the gloves are invited to the "work-outs." Lee and West will alternate at these exhibition workouts.

ADVERTISING FILLS CHURCHES

Remarkable Demonstration of Value of Newspaper Publicity in Religion.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Mar. 15.—The churches of this city have just made an unusual demonstration of the value of newspaper advertising. As the result of an advertising campaign of just one day, an average increase in the attendance in the churches of about 35 per cent was brought about.

The scheme was participated in by all the Protestant churches.

The clergymen are conducting a special movement to increase attendance at the services and fill empty pews.

One Saturday nearly all the merchants, by agreement, gave up their regular advertising space in the newspapers to the Ministerial association.

clation, which filled the papers with display advertising, urging the public to attend church.

As a result, every church was filled to overflowing Sunday.

engine as long as one gallon of gasoline, as, for instance, an 80-horsepower gasoline engine with the best practical economy will consume 10 gallons of gasoline per hour; 80 pounds of "lignolet" will operate an 80-horsepower engine one hour. With gasoline at 15 cents per gallon equals $1.50 "lignolet" at 30 cents per hundred pounds equals 24 cents; a saving of $1.26.

Any gas or gasoline engine with a slight change in the piston will operate successfully on this "lignolet" gas.

The producer for generating the gas can be set up alongside the engine and requires a very small space. This producer is similar to an ordinary coal stove.

The fuel can be placed in bags and stored in convenient places on the boat and there is absolutely no danger from explosion.

These plants can be used for any kind of power purposes on land as well as in boats. A 1,000-horsepower plant operating 10 hours a day and 300 days in the year will consume five tons of lignolet a day or 1,500 tons a year at $5.00 per ton equals $7,500, or at the rate of $7.50 per horse-power a year. Outside of water power makes this the cheapest power known.

When required, "lignolet" can be made smokeless.

They say that this lignolet can be made at a good profit and sold for less than any coal with equal fuel value.

In the making of this fuel from waste wood and slack lignite coal the following chemical by-products are produced: turpentine, tar, pitch, acetate, alcohol, oil, creosote, acid and gas.

They say that their investigations and experiments indicate that more than enough from these by-products—which are not used in the making of fuel amounts to more than the total cost of the "lignolet".

They say that probably no place on the Pacific coast offers such an opportunity to bring this system into play as does Coos Bay with its enormous waste from forests and coal mines—the two prime products utilized in their processes.

Every bit of wood including stump can be made marketable.

They feel confident that they have the proper solution for the clearing of logged-off and other timbered lands around Coos Bay and the further development of the coal mines here.

Big parties interested Coos Bay is now being looked over for a suitable site and plans perfected for a plant that will have a capacity of carbonizing and treating 100 cords of wood, 150 tons of "lignolet," 10 tons of fertilizers and the treatment of the various chemicals every 24 hours.

They think that with such an industry in operation, it will be a great stimulus to new industries on Coos Bay on account of the new fuel from which such cheap power can be developed. With a fuel at a fixed rate and the producing of cheap power therefrom, all sorts of transportation and industries for the making of pulp, paper, iron, steel, metals, implements and numerous minor articles will become practicable which otherwise would never be called into use.

And all this is to be brought about simply by the use of waste which we now throw away.
