

HINSDALE IN NEW BUSINESS

Former Gardiner Man Now Identified With Bond and Security House.

O. B. Hinsdale, formerly with the Gardiner Mill Company, and First National Bank of Coos Bay, is now making his home in Los Angeles, California, where he is associated with the house of J. H. Adams and Company. This firm has been creating and dealing in high-grade mortgage securities, and in government, municipal, school districts and corporation bonds for the past seventeen years, and has a paid in capital of three and one-half million dollars. The corporation is composed of J. H. Adams, J. S. Torrance, E. J. Marshall, H. E. Huntington Howard Huntington, and other prominent gentlemen of Los Angeles, and employs an efficient corps of expert assistants. This house does not act as broker, nor buy or sell on margin, but buys and sells bonds for its own account only. Mr. Hinsdale's experience in financial matters, and his connection with this strong bonding house qualify him to render competent advice concerning investments in general and particularly high class bond investment. He solicits inquiries from those seeking safe investments, and will give his personal attention to any such business entrusted to his care.

McCLALLEN AT LIBERTY.

Roseburg Slayer Awaits Action of Grand Jury In May.

The Roseburg News says: "After deliberating over six hours the coroner's jury empaneled to inquire into the means and manner of the death of Benjamin Arthur Mahan, the victim in Monday night's tragedy returned a verdict, in which they held that Roy McClallen who fired the fatal shot, had good reasons to fear that his life was in danger, but that he was not justified in firing the shot, which was responsible for Mahan's death."

"Holding that the verdict warranted the detention of McClallen, a warrant was issued charging him with the crime of murder in the second degree. Upon issuance of the warrant, McClallen was served with the necessary papers, and upon asking for an immediate preliminary hearing, was escorted to the office of Justice of the Peace Beaubien Marsters where he waived examination. Upon motion of Attorney W. W. Cardwell, representing the defendant, he was released from custody under bail in the sum of $7,500. According to the foregoing procedure, McClallen will enjoy his liberty until such time as the circumstances surrounding the affair can be investigated by the grand jury, in regular session during the May term of the circuit court."

BRIEFS OF BANDON.

News of City-By-the-Sea As Told By Recorder.

Willard Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller of Four Mile, died at the home of his parents, Wednesday. He was born January 15, 1903.

Max Smith, the genial proprietor of the Vienna Bakery and Cafe, took unto himself a bride at Oakland, Cal., last Saturday evening. The fortunate lady was Miss Eva Hansen, of Oakland, and the ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Hansen.

BANDON PAPER CHANGES.

Mr. T. H. Kreamer, who has been connected with the Bandon Recorder as business manager for the past two and one-half years, has sold his interest. Mr. C. E. Kopf, editor, however retains his interest, and has arranged to incorporate the paper, and will be its managing editor as before. The paper will continue to be independent in politics, and will boost for Bandon first, last and all the time.

We expect to make a number of improvements in the paper in the near future, and will continue to run a semi-weekly paper for the present, but our ultimate aim is a real live daily, with bona-fide press service as soon as the business will warrant it.—Bandon Recorder.

COOS COUNTY SEAT NEWS.

Events at Coquille As Told By The Sentinel.

Today County Clerk Watson will mail to J. C. Moreland, clerk of the supreme court, the transcript of appeal in the case of A. R. Graham versus the C. B. R. & E. R. R. & N. Co. The document comprises over 650 pages of typewritten matter, the exact number of the last page being 667. The package is certainly a bulky one and Clerk Watson was compelled to use great care in the preparation of it for shipment.

K. F. Wilson, proprietor of the Lakeport Banner and also the pencil on the Bandonian which was published for a few weeks at Bandon, was a Coquille business caller yesterday. While here Mr. Wilson made temporary arrangements for the printing of his Bandon paper at the Sentinel office.

During the present month, up to the close of the re-estate period the receipt of taxes at the sheriff's office has been $136,925.23. During this period the rebates have amounted to $4,074.10 which, added to the above amount makes a grand total of $140,995.33, the total assessment of taxes which have been paid during the month of March.

Up to the close of the duck hunting season, the county clerk had sold 392 hunters licenses to residents of Coos county. During the same period 176 combination hunters and anglers licenses were also issued and 18 anglers licenses. This makes a total of 526 licenses granted already this year and the total receipts for these has been $792 except that several of the licenses issued were made out to non-residents and the charge for these is considerable greater, making the actual receipts larger than the above figure.

ROBIN SPRING SIGNS.

People in the east have been looking eagerly for the first robin to appear there as a certain sign of the approach of spring. The contrary holds true here. When the robins appear it is a sign of warm weather. A few weeks ago there were thousands of these birds in Myrtle Point and vicinity, indicating that it was not yet warm enough for them to venture to their summer nesting places, now the flocks have dwindled until only a few mating pairs are left, indicating that in the cold regions of the country warmer days are coming, and undoubtedly it will be warmer and less stormy in this section where they find it agreeable to spend the winter. If there were railroad facilities it is probable that there would be numbers of humans in the east as sensible as the robins and spend their winters in Coos county.—Myrtle Point Enterprise.

ADVICE TO CLERKS.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

To the clerk who would succeed I say, CULTIVATE CLEANER MANNERS.

Courteous manners in little things are worth acquiring. When a customer approaches the desk offer a chair. This is a small thing, but they make your work finer. To give visitors or to give short, sharp, flippant answers even to stupid or impatient people is a great mistake. Meet readiness with unflinching patience and politeness and see how much better you feel.

To give visitors or to give short, sharp, flippant answers even to stupid or impatient people is a great mistake. Meet readiness with unflinching patience and politeness and see how much better you feel.

Most inaccuracies come from not really listening to what is said or not really seeing what you put down. The chewing of gum, tobacco or paper as a jaw exercise should be eliminated. The world is now pronouncing it vulgar, unbusiness-like, useless and silly. Keep ahead of your employer and of the board of health in this thing.

If your business is to wait on customers be careful of your dress and appearance. Do your manicuring before you reach the store. A toothbrush is a good investment. A salesman with a bad breath is dear at any price. Let your dress be quiet, neat and not too fashionable. To have a prosperous appearance helps you inwardly and helps the business.

Give each customer your whole attention, and give just as considerate attention to a little buyer as a big one.

If asked for information be sure you have it before you give it. Do not assume that the location or fact is so now because you once thought it so.

Don't misdirect. Make your directions so clear that they will be a real help.

WASTE CAN FOR USE ON STREET CORNER POLE.

Substantial Receptacle of Which Any Town Might Make Use.

The accompanying illustration shows a self closing can for receiving paper and other waste which has been in successful operation during the past four seasons, and any town that cares for the appearance of its streets might adopt it with advisability. The can is semicircular in horizontal section, with a flat back, and is made to fit into the iron street railway poles used in most cities, being held in place by a hook which engages in the latticework of the pole. This permits easy removal for the purpose of emptying the can. The bottom of the can is perforated with half inch holes, allowing water from rains to drain off.

The top is a cover which is made somewhat smaller than the can itself, allowing about one inch play between the edge of the cover and the sides of the can. The cover is fastened to a horizontal rod which extends through holes in opposite sides of the can and serves as a swivel, allowing the cover to swing downward. This rod is fastened a short distance from the back of the cover, and at the back a weight is fastened to the underside of the cover sufficiently heavy to draw the latter back to place, thus making it self-closing. The material used in the construction of the cans is heavy galvanized iron, patented. For guidance, the words "Push Down" are printed with stencil on top of the cover and the request to "Put It In Here" is stenciled on the outside of the can.

Good News For Retailers.

It is reported that the mail order houses experienced a shrinkage in business during the past year, and the head of one of the biggest mail order houses states that this shrinkage is due to the retail merchants learning to advertise their prices in big figures.

They Would Not Speculate

By GROVER S. GRIFFIN

Copyright by Grosvenor Press Association 1911

"You remember," said the Wall Street man, "the time the different interests were fighting for Northern Pacific? Well, at that time I was dipping into stocks with mighty little money and usually on 5 per cent margin. I would lose $50 one day and make several hundred the next, repeating the process vice versa.

"Now, I never could do drudgery, and my position of speculator on not enough to buy a good horse was distressing. But this was not the worst of it. I was heels over head in love, and my girl's father was aware of my financial condition. He gave me to understand that I must look elsewhere for a wife. He would never consent to give his daughter to one so reckless, and even if I gained a fortune in Wall Street it wouldn't make any difference to him, for he didn't approve of success gained in that way. Speculators were dromed.

"As for his daughter, she said she agreed with him, gave me a lecture on the folly of thinking of marriage when I had not means for support for myself alone and was liable to be lashed high and dry any day so far as my little capital was concerned. She advised me to go to work and throw out a faint hint that if I would earn no honest income she might marry me after all.

"I had no idea of doing that so long as I had a dollar in the world to put up on stocks and kept pegging away until at last I got down to buying ten shares at a time. One afternoon after I had had some successes my broker told me that I had $100 to my credit. He also told me that Northern Pacific was acting very strangely and—

"Oh, cut it short," said one of the listeners. "When the stock went up you were in for a hundred shares and made a lot of money."

"Who's telling this story?" asked the narrator sharply.

"You."

"Well, then, shut up till I get through.

"The stock was about par, and I gave an order to buy ten shares. That was just before the stock went up to a hundred and fifty. The next evening I went to see my girl and told her that I had made fifty points on Northern Pacific, having sold out that afternoon. She said that my selling was the only sensible thing connected with the transaction. When I left her she gave me a kiss and, calling me back, gave me a letter to post and another kiss.

"If I got two kisses at having made $500," I said, "how many shall I get at having made $10,000?"

"None," she replied. "If you should make that you would be all the further from reformation."

"I went away laughing, and when should I meet but Jim Atterbury. I told him of my good fortune and asked him to go and have a little supper with me. He accepted, and we went into a restaurant.

"This is a kind of confession, I suppose, and I might as well make it now I'm on the subject. We drank several bottles of wine and I became ambitious to treat Jim royally. Going into a night bank, I cashed a check for $200 and—

"Blew it all in," said the critic of the story.

"Not all of it. A pickpocket relieved me of what I didn't spend. I went to bed at 6 o'clock and didn't wake or till 5 in the afternoon. When I did I went out to get something to eat and buying a paper I saw in enormous letters in a newspaper that Northern Pacific had begun to slip up about 10 o'clock in the morning and had closed at 3 with 1000 bid.

"Wasn't I disgusted though? Had I held on a day or two I would have made a small fortune. And when I thought that out of the whole deal I hadn't left but $200 I sat down and cried. Yes, I cried; for notwithstanding the prejudice of my girl and her father against speculating, I believed a competence would have helped me through with her. Putting my hand in my pocket I found the letter she had asked me to post. I carried it to my hand till I came to a box and slipped it in, hoping that I wouldn't have to confess why I hadn't posted it the night before.

"That night there was a terrible time about Northern Pacific stock and the next morning, true enough, there were sales at 1000. In the evening, pining for sympathy, I went to see my girl. I found her in the slough of despond. I tried in vain to get out of her what was the matter but failed. Finally she said something about the letter she had given me the night before. I swore I had put it in the box a few minutes after I had left the house. She was too much in the dumps to jolly me, so I left early.

"The next morning about 9 o'clock she telephoned me to come right up to the house. I did so and found her dancing about the room like a lunatic. She came and threw both arms about my neck.

"Why did you tell me you had posted my letter when I gave it to you?" she asked.

"What do you mean?" I stammered.

"It was an order to sell 200 shares of Northern Pacific at 150. It was delayed one day and the stock was sold for 1000. I'm worth a million."

"With a trembling hand she handed me the broker's notice of sale."
