ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

And, I infer, the calf is dead.

But still he left behind his trail. And thereby hangs my moral tale.

The trail was taken up next day By a lone dog that passed that way

And then a wise bell-wether sheep Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep,

And drew the flock behind him, too, As good bell-wethers always do.

And from that day, o'er hill and

Little Talks on Advertising

TALK No. 11

THE local paper is paid for, and whatever costs something to obtain

It is read because it was bought for that particular purpose. It has influence in its field, because it virtually owns that particular field. It has, in its own way, a monopoly, and an ad in it of a dozen While here, he showed evidence of square inches is worth more than a wagon load of circulars. There being mentally unbalanced, but it never has been seen, and in all human probability there never will be was thought to be temporary from invented, a satisfactory local advertising substitute for the local newsimbibing too freely and he was at paper; all other mediums are supplementary, and effective only when used in connection with the legitimate ads in the necessary advertis-

> The local paper is read by everybody who has any purchasing power, The rich may sometimes laugh at its defects, and criticize its style and general appearance, but they read it all the same, and the more they find fault with it, the more do they prove that their reading of it is thorough. Their "kicking" is of no importance to the merchant who advertises in the paper.

If the local merchant is well known he must keep up his extensive acquaintance through the medium of the local press. If he is not known he requires introduction through the same medium. There is something seriously wrong with any merchant who cannot utilize the advertising columns of his local paper. Of course, the local paper must be used intelligently to produce results, but this remark is applicable to all kinds of business. Care must be taken in writing the ads; sufficient space must be used, but it is unprofitable to wrste space. A very large ad will probably be read wherever it is placed; too small an ad may escape notice even when at the head of a column and next to reading matter.
