Business Progress

It is the ambition of all men to be successful—to broaden out in knowledge and learning, to be leaders, to make themselves known as men of individuality. A man who can carry out his ambitions along these lines is a powerful factor in molding the opinions of others, therefore, in all things, he should strive to reach the highest standards.

It is the same in business. Most of us commence on a small scale and gradually broaden out as we are able, or as the community grows.

Expansion in business is simply increasing your capacity to meet all the requirements of your customers. This has been the policy of Lockhart's Grocery from the start.

We have enlarged and branched out in every department. Our stock is the largest on Coos Bay, our selling capacity the greatest, our delivery system is of the best, our working force is courteous, up-to-date, and efficient in every respect, and last but not least our prices are as low as consistent with good quality.

OUR LATEST IMPROVEMENT is one of which our patrons will particularly approve. We now have to handle our rapidly increasing business. If you have had trouble with the line before, try it now. No more long waits over the telephone, no more "Line's Busy";—we can now handle your orders just as fast as you can telephone them in to

Two Private Telephone Lines
