EXPECT WAR IN MEXICO TO LAST TWO MONTHS LONGER

President Diaz Will Make Concessions Then to End Struggle Is Report.

INSURRECTOS PLAN TO DEFEND JUAREZ

Capture of Town Gives Rebel Army Large Amount of Ammunition.

TO LAST TWO MONTHS. (By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, N. Y., May 11.—According to private messages received here from Vasquez Gomez, Madero's chief adviser at Juarez, the war in Mexico will last about two months longer at which time Diaz is expected to make concessions to terminate hostilities.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

JUAREZ, Mex., May 11.—The insurrectos are determined not only to hold Juarez against any attack but to prevent fighting in this vicinity if possible. Plans are being laid at Insurrecto headquarters to send several hundred men south to meet Colonel Rabago and a force of Federals who are reported on the way here from Chihuahua. Rebels from other points will also oppose his advance. The town is quiet today.

General Navarro, who was paroled with his officers, spent the night in the same house with Francisco I. Madero, Jr.

The capture of Juarez was the most important event in the revolution not only because it is the port of entry to the United States and the insurrectos believe that within the next twenty-four hours food supplies will be crossing the line unmolested, but because they are now in possession of 450,000 rounds of ammunition, several machine guns, field pieces, 700 Mauser rifles and other equipment to make an effective fighting force.

Conservative leaders express the hope that the bloody battle of Juarez will mark the last chapter in the military side of the revolution. They now wish to turn their endeavors to more peaceful methods. Rebel leaders are revising and strengthening the demands made before the battle. They will demand the fixing of an exact time for the resignation of President Diaz.

Shut Out Criminals. General Madero told the Associated Press today that many American criminals had arrived in Juarez and were giving the impression that they are insurrectos. He ordered therefore that American secret service men be allowed to cross into Juarez and arrest the criminals whom they know.

LET US TALK IT OVER

PASSING events often recall to our minds old and almost-forgotten tales of our youth.

Once upon a time in Greece there was a state composed of poor but brave and patriotic citizens. They served the state unselfishly. The welfare of the state, in their minds, was above all individual interests.

But, according to this old story, a number of the people became traders. Gold and silver coins drifted in from other countries. The citizens learned that money meant individual power. It released the possessor from the necessity of doing his share of work because he could hire other men to do things for him. Instead of devoting their time and thought to the general welfare, the citizens of this state neglected their public duties and devoted their time to the accumulation of money. From a state composed of courageous and virtuous citizens the character of the people was becoming gradually undermined. Instead of considering the general welfare, each man considered only his individual interest. Instead of uniting in defending the country against the common enemy of all, the citizens started quarreling among themselves about gold and silver.

At this critical period of the state's history a wise ruler had a law passed that the only medium of exchange in the country should be of iron. Gold and silver could not be used as money, but it could be exchanged with the state treasury for a circulating medium of iron. The result was that those men who had amassed hoards of money were laughed at by their fellow men for their great stores of iron. No man could carry much money with him because the medium of exchange was too heavy and too bulky. While it had seemed proper for a man to devote his life to the accumulation of gold and silver, it appeared absurd for him to put in his entire time accumulating great stocks of iron. So, according to this story, the citizens of this state again became virtuous and undivided in their devotion to the welfare of the state itself.

Once upon a time after we grew up we knew of a city that was peopled with a small but industrious number of citizens. All these citizens lived together as members of one large family. All worked for the common interest and all prospered. But after awhile people began coming from other places to this city. The first citizens prospered greatly and then some of them became greedy. A peculiar thing about money is that the more a man makes the poorer he feels and the more he wants. None in this world feel so insecure as the wealthy. So a few of these citizens decided to combine together for their own interest. They controlled everything, exploited everything for their own advantage and smiled insidiously with a feeling of contempt for the common people.

But after a while a still smaller number said among themselves, "Why should we not combine and control these things instead of sharing it with even a select few." So this came to pass. And they still further concentrated the division of the good things.

Then the natural and logical result of such a condition worked out. The men in the first combination lost confidence in the men in the second. They became dissatisfied notwithstanding they had prospered. Then the outsiders also became dissatisfied. So we see a community that once worked harmoniously and happily for the general good now pulling against each other because each man thought only of his individual and selfish interest. The result was that public affairs languished and after a little while the city ceased to grow and prosper.

In order for one to grasp the drift of events in communal development he must get certain conditions clearly outlined in his mind. The first is that there cannot be continued growth and prosperity without cooperation. Just so long as there is a feeling of individual selfishness, just so long will there be an absence of general interest and petty jealousies and prejudices.

What wonders Coos Bay could accomplish if all its citizens would really co-operate! There's just about nothing worth doing that they couldn't accomplish with comparative ease. Co-operation would make many important things possible.

Co-operation is a word that nearly every one can spell, though few seem to have acquired the full meaning of it. It simply means working together, putting one's shoulder, man-fashion to the wheel, for the general good. There are few community troubles which honest, willing, enthusiastic co-operation will not quickly set right. It's merely a matter of getting together, then sticking and working together earnestly. Think it over!

WOOL RATES TO BE PROBED

Interstate Commerce Commission Orders Investigation of Freight Charges.

(By Associated Press to the Coos Bay Times.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11.—A comprehensive investigation of the alleged unreasonable freight rates on wool, hides and pelts from western points of origin to eastern destinations, was ordered today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The inquiry will affect wool hides and pelt rates throughout the country.

The investigation developed from complaints filed by the National Wool Growers and Oregon Railway Commission against western carriers alleging the existing rates on wool, hides, pelts are excessive, exorbitant and discriminatory. When the commission decided what is known as the "Pacific Coast cases," it declined, because of lack of evidence to pass on the reasonableness of the wool rates but reserved them for future disposition.

The inquiry order is general in the scope, points of origin being in states west of the Mississippi and in Illinois, and the destination between all wool and hide centers from west of the Missouri to the Atlantic coast. No date is set for beginning the inquiry.
