A SPLENDID TYPE.

EX-GOVERNOR FOLK is a clean-cut, able, well balanced public man. He draws the line sharp and clear between what is right and what is wrong in government affairs. Yet he is not bitter or one-sided about it. He calmly points out the course that should be followed and insists the path be taken. His record shows that he has the courage of his convictions and that he is a doer of the right as well as a believer in the right.

Governor Folk is of the type of men America needs at this time. Theodore Roosevelt is another. They are exponents of the simple virtues. They call for the exercise of common honesty and the application of the square deal. Both men look upon the overrich and the wretchedly poor as equally undesirable. Over-wealth and squalor are both products of an abnormal state of affairs. In the misery of the multimillionaire and of the pauper there is an element of similarity. One is overfed, the other starved. Both classes constitute a menace to the republic.

Governor Folk takes the view that the colossal fortunes which now threaten this country are not due to industry and ability so much as to the enjoyment of unjust privileges. These privileges must be cut away and they will be as time goes on. The regulation of corporation by the government looks to this end. The adoption of the initiative and the referendum, the direct primary and the recall are steps in the same direction. These things are desired because they tend to keep the government in the hands of the people and do away with legislation for special interests and of the administration of the government in behalf of those interests.

Like other wise men Governor Folk is an optimist. While there are many things that may be criticised he sees hope in the fact that the criticism is forthcoming. He knows that the world goes forward, not backward and that man is a rising animal, not a fallen angel. The golden age is before us, not behind us. It is only necessary that our democracy be maintained in truth as well as in name and that the forces of privilege be not allowed to gain the mastery.

A man or woman who reads poetry will finally attempt to write it.
