PRES. W. J. KERR ON EDUCATION

Urges More Practical Courses in Public Schools—Commencement Over.

Seven students were graduated at the commencement exercises of the Marshfield High school held last evening at the Masonic Opera House, before a large audience.

William J. Kerr, president of the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis delivered the commencement address, the Rev. J. T. M. Knox pronounced the invocation, and President M. C. Horton of the school board distributed the diplomas to the graduates.

In an impressive speech, the main theme of which was the history of education in the United States from the beginning to the present date, President Kerr traced the growth and development of the educational system of the country.

Recounting the hardships encountered in the first attempts to establish the early institutions of learning in this country, the speaker then made a strong plea for more industrial scientific schools, where practical studies could be pursued.

"Latin and Greek are splendid studies for the development of the mind," said Mr. Kerr, "but they are of small immediate value to the boy who graduating from the high school drifts into farming. What we want and need is the incorporation of more practical studies into the high school and college courses. Subjects relating to agriculture and science could even be taught to pupils of the seventh and eighth grades in the grammar schools.

"The growth of the scientific schools has been rapid, and although the greater number of the most notable of these institutions are located on the Atlantic Coast and in the middle west, in time to come, the Pacific Coast will have its share of agricultural and scientific schools.

"Courses of domestic science and art for women have been instituted in many of the best colleges and universities of the country, until today it is generally recognized that the most efficient house wives and mothers are those who have college education."

In concluding his address, President Kerr paid his respects to the members of the graduating class, urging them to their best efforts in whatever business, trade or profession they may elect to follow after leaving school.

Before presenting the diplomas, M. C. Horton made some appropriate remarks to the graduates. Those who received diplomas were Misses Nellie Tribbey, Mary Hansen, Alice Curtis, Belva Flanagan and John Ferguson, Joe Bennett and Eric Bolt. The exercises of the evening began with the "Swing Song" and concluded with "Good Night" by the girls' sextette, both of which were well rendered.

Tender Social Functions. Last evening, following the program at the Opera House, the Junior Class tendered a banquet and reception to the graduates at the High school building. Following a sumptuous repast, a program of toasts was enjoyed. Milton Carlson presided as toastmaster and among the responses were: "Ideals of College Life"—President Kerr.

"Fleecia"—Miss Jessie Chase. "Loyalties of School"—Miss Nellie A. Montgomery.

"Our Appreciation"—Miss Belva Flanagan.

"Generalities"—Prof Hewitt.

"Importance of Alumni Associ-tions"—Supt. Tiedgen.

Among those present were President Kerr, Miss Montgomery, Joe Bennett, Belva Flanagan, Hazel Powers, Mary Hansen, Milton Carlson, May Preuss, Eric Bolt, Supt. Tiedgen, Jessie Chase, Nellie Tribbey, Bartlett Flanagan, Mary Price, Lucy Juza, Prof. Hewitt, Mrs. Tiedgen, John Ferguson, Miss Woods, Prof. Applewhite, Nora Tower and Ernest Harrington.

Today the members of the graduating class are enjoying a class picnic at Emergen's Grove on South Coos River, the Alice H being engaged for the trip.

Richmond Suffers Famine 'n Houses

(From San Francisco Examiner.) RICHMOND, Jan. 26.—There is a cry for more dwelling houses in Richmond, though new ones are going up everywhere. The Industrial Commission of this city, which is spending much money and energy in its advancement, has hit upon a plan to aid in adding to the number of homes. It will ask nonresident lot owners to erect houses to help supply the demand.

There are hundreds of persons who bought in Richmond who are resting content with the profit they are getting in the increase in realty values. The Industrial Commission will point out to these the excellent revenue that can be obtained from dwellings erected for renting.

With the addition of the Pullman works the demand has been given a still greater increase and to accommodate many families drawn here by these works and who have taken residences temporarily in Berkeley, the Santa Fe has put on a morning and evening motor service to and from that city.
