A COLLEGE GIRL'S DAY.
SHE breakfasts on a pickle.
And then the custom is
To go and spend a nickel
Upon a glass of fizz.

ALONG about ten-thirty
She needs some cold fare
And goes with Grace or Gertie
To purchase an eclair.

AT twelve on pile she lurches,
And through the afternoon
From time to time she munches
A dainty macaroon.

HER pocketbook she'll pillage
At dusk and gayly trudge
To purchase in the village
Ingredients for fudge.

AT night, with loosened tresses,
It is her dearest wish
To cook up awful messes
Upon a chafing dish.

AND when she's done with brewing
And all the house is dumb
She goes to bed still chewing
Her little wad of gum.

HAVE you seen him? Do you think you would recognize him if you were to meet him? You have probably noticed the failings of the husbands whom your chums have married.

Are you expecting to get one more perfect—the king of all men, an ideal?

You have made up your mind, of course, that he should not smoke, drink, gamble, or cast an admiring eye on any other woman—in short, be a paragon of perfection, says Laura Jean Libbey. Must he be faultless in his attire, a pink of politeness in manner, a veritable Beau Brummel?

What would you say if an everyday sort of fellow came to woo you—a man not given to pretty speeches, or flowery compliments, who couldn't see, for the life of him, what a man needed of more than two suits of clothes—one for business, the other his Sunday best?

Suppose he didn't care a fig for lectures, but did go in for baseball, hockey, tennis, and all legitimate manly sports—would he rise or fall in your estimation?

If he walked barefooted from the farm to the city when a boy, working his way up to an enviable position in a big firm—would you consider him as manly as the fellow who has leaned on his father to pay for his college education, with a tossup as to whether he knows any more when he came out than when he went in?

Do you think that you would rather have a man who can talk poetry by the yard, or a man who knows the rudiments of earning bread and butter? What about the fellow whose family lives for the sole purpose of making a show; who blew in their united salaries to live in a brown stone front, with a hired automobile?

Would he stand in higher favor with you than the man who lived Not one girl in a hundred is competent to choose the genuine man when brilliant imitations are scattered about her path!

The girl who marries the "rough diamond" seldom regrets it; she knows its value and thanks the Lord, for giving such a treasure into her keeping. It is not to be wondered at that young and inexperienced girls often err in their judgment—if they know that their parents throw their influence in favor of the man whose father has a fortune.

There are few young girls who are brave enough to say to their advisers: "My choice seems the poorer of the two, but his little finger is worth more than the other one's entire body."

A sensible father would soon see the force of her argument, even though it might take some little time to win her mother over to her way of thinking. A girl who would marry happily must get away from the belief that he is faultless. Every man in the world has some fault; he has his own lovable traits as well.

All dandies should not be cried down because of their fondness for dress or exuberance in speech. Their hearts may be all right. Still, when weighed against his blunt brother, he often falls short of the standard of human perfection. Very young girls think that love can make up for all deficiencies.

Their futures, for weal or woe, depend upon the man whom they choose as life partner. If in doubt about the advisability of accepting the proposal of a rough diamond, I would say, give him the benefit of the doubt by marrying him. No girl should lay down a rule as to a man having to be just "so and so" or she will not marry him. The chances are that she will go wide of her roseate dreams.

A girl's idea of a husband must be molded over a score of times ere it takes proper shape. It is only by knowing and contrasting one with the other that she is able to discriminate as to the superiority of the one best suited to clasp her hand through life. The girl who makes a haphazard selection has plenty of time to regret choosing in haste her ideal of a husband. The man she would marry at 20 she is indifferent to at 25. She positively dislikes the same man when she is 30. I do not mean that girls should wait until they are 30 to settle the mooted question of a heart mate. Most girls are wise enough to make their selection at five and twenty; others are never old enough to decide what their ideal of a husband is.

One of the pleasing events of the week socially was the reception and banquet tendered by the ladies of the Progress club to their husbands at the beautiful Sengstacken home, on Monday evening. This enjoyable function is an annual affair and marks the close of the club's year of work and study. No element conducive to a perfect whole was lacking. "The feast of reason, the flow of soul," were there; music added its charms; the artistic beauty of the home rendered gratifying response to the appeal of the aesthetic sense, and pervading all, that indescribable charm of the hostesses which was more than graciousness, more than courtesy, more than hospitality, a subtle something of the soul that transcends them all and from which emanate cheer and welcome.

Bridge, music, toasts and topical talks were among the diversions of the evening. The banquet was a delight and the courses interspersed with the "feast of reason" made the occasion memorable.

The banquet table presented a picture that was a tribute to the artistic sense of the club's domestic qualities. A number of impromptu toasts added to the enjoyment of the evening. Among those responding to toasts were: I. S. Kaufman, Mrs. H. Sengstacken, Mrs. I. S. Kaufman, Mr. M. C. Horton, Mrs. C. W. Tower.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Tower, Mr. and Mrs. Lafon, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Maloney, Mr. and Mrs. H. Sengstacken, Mrs. W. S. Turpen, Mrs. Ingram, Mrs. C. W. Tower, Miss Nellie Tower, Mr. M. C. Horton, Miss Elizabeth Kaufman, Miss Genevieve Sengstacken, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Street, Mrs. J. M. Upton.

Last Thursday evening, Miss Genevieve Sengstacken tendered a farewell for Miss Jessie Chase who left Friday for Portland and an extended eastern trip. The house was prettily decorated, pink wigwags and candles being used effectively on the tables. At 5:00, Mrs. R. K. Booth won first prize, Mrs. M. C. Maloney second prize and Mrs. Effie Farringer the consolation. Refreshments were served. Among those invited were Mesdames G. A. Bennett, R. K. Booth, Effie Farringer, W. H. Kennedy, W. T. Merchaut, E. Mingus, M. C. Maloney and J. T. McCormac and Misses Nellie Tower, Nann Brownings, Mamie Maloney, Charlotte Murca, Daisy Rush, Edna Stanley, Marie Maloney and Elizabeth Kaufman.

The last picnic of the Marshfield school was held at Enegron's grove on Coos River Thursday, the Alice H having been chartered for the occasion. Rowing, swimming, dancing, baseball and a bounteous picnic dinner were the principle enjoyments. The weather was particularly warm for this time of the year. Among those enjoying the outing were: Misses Martha Ross, Rose Wall, Alice Cox, Lucy Juza, Nellie Tribbey, May Myren, May Preuss, Evelyn Langworthy, Isis Marsh, Belva Flanagan, Bessie Flanagan, Hattie Hansen, Maybelle and Florence Farley, Edna Hanson, Miss George, Nora Tower, Frances Williams, Grace Kruse, and John Ferguson, Ernest Harrington, Eric Bolt, Ralph Kruse, Ralph Williams, Chauncey Clarke, Noble Pittman, Donald McGeorge, Fred McCormac, Bartlett Flanagan, Walter Jensen, Tom Patterson, George Murch, Sidney, Clarke, George Johnson, Carl Larson, Will Horton, and Joe Bennett.

Mrs. Geo. Watkins has extended invitations to the members of the North Bend, Eastside and Marshfield Women's Christian Temperance Unions for a strawberry social at "The Cedars" at an early day.

A very enjoyable and profitable afternoon was spent last Wednesday when Mrs. Henry Black entertained the Women's Mission Circle of the Baptist church at her home on South Fifth street. The subject of the afternoon's study was another phase of negro progress. "The Negro as a Christian," and was presented by Mrs. Black, Mrs. Ellen Siglin, Mrs. A. Z. Downs, Miss Mamie Gulovson, and Mrs. G. L. Hall. Mrs. R. P. Harrington assisted the hostess in serving delicious refreshments. Those present were Mrs. Ellen Siglin, Mrs. A. Z. Downs, Mrs. E. W. Lewis, Mrs. Bertha Carlson, Miss Ericson, Mrs. Green, Mrs. R. P. Harrington, Mrs. Henry Black, Mrs. G. L. Hall, Mrs. Gosney, Mrs. Amanda Rose, Miss Gulovson, Mr. Black, Whitford Hall and Abert Gosney.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Kaufman announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Mr. Thomas Baldwin Brown of Chicago. The wedding will take place in July.

The farewell party given in honor of Miss Alice Curtis at the home of Miss Mary Hansen, last Saturday evening by the senior girls of the Marshfield High school was a most delightful affair. Music, games and other diversions made a very enjoyable evening. Light, dainty refreshments were served. The guests present were Misses Nora Tower, May Preuss, Jessie Chase, Myrtle Cowan, Lucy Juza, Harriet Hansen, Alice Curtis, Alice Cox, Evelyn Langworthy, Bessie Flanagan; and the hostesses were: Misses Nellie Tribbey, Belva Flanagan, Rose Wall and Mary Hansen.

Miss Eugenia Schilling of Gardiner was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. W. P. Murphy, here this week. Her fiancée, Robt. Dickson of Eugene has also been visiting here. Mr. Dickson is assistant supervisor of the forestry service in the Eugene district. Their marriage will take place this fall, it is understood.

Miss Mary Jamieson, the Marshfield city librarian, left this week to visit relatives at Portland, Salem and other northern points.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place last Saturday evening at 8:30, at the home of A. J. Savage when their youngest daughter, Miss Madge and Herbert Louis Coleman were united in matrimony. The marriage ceremony was performed under an arch of white roses by the Rev. R. E.

Pretty Dresses for Summer Days

Stylish Costumes of Fine Wool French Shallies, and Pretty Figured Silk Foulards. Cool Dresses of Pretty, Dainty Lingerie Materials
