FERRY BOYS STOP RUNAWAY

By Heroic Act, Local Men Rescue Imperilled Girl.

Miss Beatrice Smith, an operator in the local office of the telephone company narrowly escaped being severely injured by the running away of a spirited horse attached to a buggy in which she was seated at the base-ball ground yesterday afternoon, and George and Jim Ferry, two well-known local boys, risked their lives in a successful attempt to bring the frightened animal to a standstill.

Miss Smith was the guest at the ball game yesterday of Mr. Norman Johnson, and two drove to the game in the latter's buggy. During the game, Johnson removed the bridle from the animal's head and, before he replaced the piece of harness before the drive home after the game he seated Miss Smith in the rig.

Just as he was about to slip the bridle over the horse's head, the band struck up a lively air and the horse, frightened at the sudden burst of music, threw Johnson aside and dashed madly up the incline towards the Hall street bridge.

Having no means of controlling the crazed animal, Miss Johnson was helpless.

Hearing the commotion behind them, Ferry took in the situation with one backward glance and when the bridleless horse came abreast of them George Ferry threw himself upon its neck with such force as to cause it to stumble and fall. Jim Ferry then held the animal to the ground until his brother was able to extricate himself and until Johnson, who had followed the runaway, helped Miss Smith from the buggy.

Despite the terrible ordeal, the girl showed wonderful pluck and, after Johnson had placed the bridle on the horse, she insisted upon riding into town with him.

She has suffered no ill effects, and from her place at the telephone exchange this morning modestly disclaimed having played the role of heroine in so near a tragedy.

Temperature here today reached 91 degrees. Four deaths and numerous prostrations are recorded for the past 24 hours.

Jack Marsden Attempts to Murder Attorney J. W. Bennett.

IS JAILED ON CHARGE OF ATTEMPT TO KILL
Action Result of Grudge Over Law Suit Against Father.

Jack Marsden, a saloon keeper from North Bend is lodged in the city jail charged with assault with intent to kill. Attorneys J. W. and Tom Bennett in the Flanagan & Bennett Bank building shortly after two o'clock this afternoon.

According to the story of the affair in the hands of the police, Marsden, J. W. Bennett and Tom Bennett all went up to the office together to talk over the results of a recent law suit brought by Marsden against his father and in which the Bennetts figured as attorneys for Robert Marsden, senior.

They first went into the office occupied by J. W. Bennett in the building, but, fearing trouble with Marsden, who had previously threatened the elder Bennett's life, they retired to an inner office occupied by Tom Bennett. At J. W. Bennett's request Tom Bennett remained in the room.

During the discussion of the case that ensued, Marsden became more and more abusive and reached a climax by drawing a revolver from his pocket while addressing the words "I'll get you now," to J. W. Bennett.

Marsden had no sooner drawn his gun than he was pounced upon and thrown to the floor of the office. Tom Bennett, who, with the assistance of his father, succeeded in bringing the would-be murderer while stenographer in the office reached window opening over the crowd street below and screamed for help.

Marshal Jack Carter, who was attracted by the girl's cries, hurried to the office, followed by a large crowd and placed Marsden under arrest.

The feeling which led up to the near tragedy today is of long standing. Some time ago Marsden brought suit against his father to recover $750. The Bennetts appeared at the trial as attorneys for the defendant. The jury in the case refused to recognize young Marsden's claim, besides deciding the amount against him, ordered him to pay his father the sum of $200.

Marsden has several times threatened that he was going to kill J. W. Bennett for his connection in the case, but the Bennett's always look upon the threat as an empty one.
