COST OF DRAIN LINE

Vice-President O'Brien Denies Big Waste on It.

The Southern Pacific Company, in an official circular signed by J. P. O'Brien, takes exception to the following item appearing in the Newport, Oregon, Reporter, under the caption of "Money Wasted."

"The S. P. R. R. acknowledges a loss of two million on the Drain line to Coos Bay. While we regret this money was not expended on the right route to Coos Bay we are quite sure this county would have appreciated the expenditure of $100,000 (estimated cost of extension to Newport,) where the company could have earned the Harriman demand of 4 per cent and accommodate a long suffering and constantly increasing traffic."

O'Brien's Reply

In answer to the foregoing Mr. O'Brien in his circular says:

"The loss sustained by the Southern Pacific Company on the Drain-Marshfield line, after the steel structures, which can be used elsewhere, have been removed, will not exceed $60,000, which is considerably less than the sum of two million dollars referred to in the Newport Reporter; also that the Southern Pacific Company has not heretofore acknowledged a loss of two million dollars, or any amount, on the Drain line; also that the cost of the extension from Yaquina to Newport will be $200,000 instead of $100,000 as the article states, and the line will be a very expensive one to maintain."

PORT ORFORD PENCILINGS.

Some Curry County Happenings as Told in The Tribune.

Fresh apples are scarce this year, and are selling at our stores at 4 cents a pound. Money is the cheapest thing we have this year, but it is hard to get and still harder to keep if you have to eat.

The Bandon called in here Saturday morning for railroad ties, but after taking on 7 or 8 hundred, a light south wind scared them out, and they pulled out for San Francisco, fearing a storm.

Frank and Carl Tichenor spent part of last Thursday fishing from a boat on our famous lake, and came in with two of the longest strings we have seen this year. They passed the century mark, and many of the trout were 10 and 12 inches in length.

While driving out of town with his wife and a lot of lady friends last week, John Ulican's veteran team, suddenly met an auto at a turn in the road, and became so excited as to threaten to epizize the wagon, whereupon Mrs. Sylvia Quigley jumped out and sustained a dislocated ankle. The men in the auto stopped and rushed to the rescue, and prevented a serious disaster. They took Mrs. Quigley in the auto and hastened to Dr. Glanville's, who treated the patient. There were eight men in the auto, whose names and mission we did not learn, as they passed through town without stopping, and went on down the coast, but, anyway they acted white.

"THE CALL TO WORSHIP"

BISHOP SCADDING DELIVERS INTERESTING SERMON AT EM-MANUEL CHURCH.

The Right Rev. Charles Scadding, D. D., bishop of Oregon, officiated at Emmanuel Church on Sunday morning, and in the afternoon went to Empire and North Bend where the Episcopal church is growing. At the morning service he gave an interesting account of the work of the church in Oregon, and its growth during the last five years, laying emphasis on the service the Episcopal church is rendering the state through the Good Samaritan hospital; St. Helen's hall, the Church school for girls; and St. Elizabeth house; and then he urged the return to worship as one of the great religious needs of the day. He said in part: "Preaching is only part, and a small part, of the presentation of God to human society. It is one medium for the administration of the remedy for the malady of the age. Another and a surer is worship. Calls are coming thick to the modern church and they are so loud, and so insistent, and so real, and so worthy, that they are apt to drown the profoundest one of all. There is the call to social service, to organize, to extend missions, to give, to teach. We are bound to heed them all. But, if they or anything else dull our ears to the call to worship, it is as if everything in the human body were trying to function without the heart."

The call to worship is the sounding of a new rally in habits of church attendance. This is really the weak spot of the church today. No newspaper editorial, or magazine article, or other outside investigation of the question "what is the matter with the church" will be as illuminating as just this simple understanding of the fundamental relation of worship as a habit to church interest. In a parish where there is this spirit of worship and devotion there may not be many of the signs of stir and worldly success that have grown around modern parish life, yet the health will be sound in all heart action. God is not a far off remedy. He is not an "absent treatment." He is here. Emmanuel—God with us. For redemptive purposes Christ's life is extended in His Mystical Body. He is waiting to receive you, and you must find him where He is waiting. He is waiting in His Church. And if you ask her where you will find Him she gives you her age-long answer in the Sacraments of His grace.

Make the Sacrifice and the Sacrament of the Altar the center of your activity and the source of your life, and you will have a growing sense of eternal realities, and the things of time and sense, "the things of earth which we grieve with lashes wet" will fall into their proper perspective. Your characteristic act as a creature toward God is worship. Fence off a bit of time every day for prayer. Cultivate a sense of the adorable Presence of God by trying to form the habit of ejaculatory prayer. In your walk, in your business, in your play, give a thought to Him Who loved you and gave Himself for you. This in private, and then in public "forsake not the assembling of yourselves for the breaking of bread and the prayers." Your religion is the religion of the cross. No man in the world escapes the cross. But the religion of the cross deprives it of its terror by encountering it, and voluntarily clasping it. It can never be a religion which costs you nothing and you must not evade its discipline. All the rules of the church embodied in the prayer book you must obey in letter and in spirit, and these are the things which make strong churchmen and strong parishes. Besides time and space for prayer you must give personal service, and you must give money; not as an assessment, but as an expression of worship. Money is power, and we hold this power, with all the rest of our power, a sacred trust from God, and it must be expended in His sight, and a due proportion must be offered to His service."

The bishop and Mrs. Scadding leave on Wednesday morning for Roseburg and then to Seattle where the bishop opens the convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Visits Other Churches. Bishop Charles Scadding made his annual visitation yesterday afternoon to the Episcopal church at Empire and at North Bend. Both churches were very beautifully decorated with

OWNS PAPERS 144 YEARS OLD

Mrs. George Blanchard, Formerly of Marshfield, Has Unique Copies.

Mrs. George Blanchard, formerly of Marshfield, but now a resident of Newport, Oregon, has some of the oldest newspapers in the country. Mrs. Blanchard has a penchant for collecting old and unique bits of literature and while here presented considerable matter to the Marshfield public library. Concerning the old papers, in her possession, a Newport dispatch says:

Mrs. George Blanchard, of Newport, Or., is the owner of a precious heirloom in two copies of the Boston Gazette and Country Journal, of August 31 and September 7, 1767. They are diminutive four-column quartos printed when paper was heavily taxed. Principal front-page features are advertisements of a lottery to raise $900 towards rebuilding Faneuil Hall. There were 2,225 tickets sold at $4 each, making $8000, and $8000 was given in prizes, which ran from $6 up to $2000. Thus did our ancestors gamble to help the cause of liberty.

There are also advertisements of negroes offered for sale. Second-hand chaises and old spinners seem to have been in great demand. Jackson's mineral bath, it is announced, will be filled every morning, persons to take their turn in the water in the order as they come.

"To be sold for no fault, a strong healthy negro man, aged 36," is a standing advertisement. The death of Mrs. Blanchard's great-grandmother is announced as follows: "On Wednesday died and this day was decently buried, the remains of Mrs. Alice Whitney, A. E. 50, the virtuous and amiable consort of the Rev. Mr. Aaron Whitney, of this place."

Fifty dollars reward is offered for the apprehension of the thief who tore a copper plate, which was affixed there in commemoration of the repeal of the stamp act. Jane Eustis offers at her shop, north side of the Townhouse, "a large assortment, very neat, patent wove stays of various sizes." In order that the ladies may more easily find her palace of fashions, she describes it as, "located just above the orange tree leading to the Rev. Mr. Howard's meeting-house."

Read this: "A likely negro fellow, about 26, who can do any sort of business, is to be sold or exchanged for a lar of 16, for no other fault but having too long a tongue." One Jolly Allen had the big department store with a full-page advertisement, and kept everything then known as merchandise under the sun, "at his shop about midway between the Governor's and the Townhouse, and almost opposite the Heart and Crown, in Cornhill."

The front page of the same paper contains the announcement of the result of the drawing of the Faneuil Hall lottery. The professional horticulturist was then on earth and advertised grafted and "inoculated" fruit trees. For good reasons there are no editorials and political articles are all anonymous. One plea ends: "We must be free and leave this fair inheritance to our children. Slavery we cannot think of. We detest it!"

flowers of every description and there were many in attendance at the services. The bishop preached and confirmed the following persons: Charles Getty, Miss Alpha Peterson and Miss Isabel Macgenn of Empire, Miss Elizabeth Pearl Heath, Miss Rhoda Lily Butler and Mrs. Ira B. Bartle of North Bend.

In addition to the floral decorations, the appearance of the church at North Bend was made very attractive by the addition of the necessary furniture including handsome brasses and coverings for the Altar. Bishop Scadding expressed great joy over the progress of the church at Empire and North Bend.
