

GOES TO MINNEAPOLIS TO BOOST COOS BAY

P. J. Heald Goes East to Handle Local Real Estate and Encourage Emigration to This Section.

Mr. P. J. Heald of the Reynolds Development company, who has spent the last two months in Marshfield, departed for the east this morning. He will represent the company in Minneapolis, selling lots in the new addition and otherwise encouraging emigration to the Coos Bay country.

Mr. Heald was at Panama eight months preceding his visit to the Bay and was there in charge of the government's steamship lines. He anticipates great good will result to Pacific coast ports from the opening of the canal and that particularly Coos Bay will be benefited.

"The combined effort of railroad communication and the opening of the canal route to Atlantic ports will surely make Marshfield grow like magic," said Mr. Heald in a recent interview. "I have visited Marshfield to inform myself further of its prospects and am more favorably impressed than ever. I knew you had a splendid harbor and other geographic advantages; I am glad also to find your wealth of timber and other natural resources surrounding this port are so wonderfully great. Also I am impressed with the extent of civic improvement already accomplished in the city of Marshfield where undoubtedly the entering railroads will make their terminals."

Option Expires.

The option which Taggart Astor, chief engineer for the Coos Bay & Eastern, held on the Hennessey and Sengstacken tide-flat holdings across the bay, expired a few days ago. Mr. Astor did not close under the old option but has been negotiating for a new option until December 1 at an advanced price. The reason for not closing on the property is stated to have been that his survey was not sufficiently advanced to enable him to determine whether the property in question would fit into his plans for terminals.

NEWS OF GARDINER.

(Special to The Times.)

GARDINER, Ore., Sept. 15.—The new Methodist church, which is being built on the site of the one that was recently destroyed by fire, is nearing completion. It is a modern structure and very neat in appearance and cost in the neighborhood of $3,000.

The Gardiner schools opened September fourth with a good enrollment, all the grades to the 10th being represented. Although the school is crowded and involves a great deal of work for two teachers, Prof. Austin and Miss Romig.

Harry Graham, captain of the "Flash," was severely bitten by a hog Saturday morning while loading it on the scow. The wound, though painful is not dangerous.

A stage has been put on between Gardiner and Glenada. This will be a great boon to the traveling public. The route is over the new road and shortens the distance considerably.

The traveling public and the people in general who make frequent trips on the "Eva" will miss its genial and accommodating captain, James Smith, Jimmy, as his friends know him, has bought the Haskell farm and will soon move on to it.

FINED FOR BORROWING PAPER.

Alton Judge Punishes Woman for Appropriating Neighbor's Paper

To borrow a neighbor's newspaper is a punishable offense according to Magistrate Lessner of Alton, Ill., in the case of Mrs. Muriel Jackson, who was accused of taking a Sunday morning paper from the porch of Mrs. Mary Kelley, her neighbor.

Mrs. Jackson did not deny taking the newspaper, but said she had only borrowed it, intending to return it. State's Attorney Wilson was disposed to allow the case to be dismissed, when Judge Lessner interfered and assessed a fine against the defendant, thereby establishing a precedent for Alton in all classes where persons appropriate newspapers which were not intended for them.

PRaises COOS EXHIBIT.

Hundreds of Visitors View Display at State Fair.

A Salem dispatch to a Portland paper says: "Coos county has an exhibit which has been tucked away in an isolated part of the pavilion, but its isolation has not caused it to be unsought or unseen. Hundreds of people viewed this exhibit with keen interest despite the fact that all of the material for the display was not on hand. As usual, Coos county sent to the fair one of the choicest quality displays of Gravenstein apples that could be found. Coos differentiates in its exhibit to a greater extent than many of the counties. Its splendid specimens of woods and forest products attracts the eye and in addition are coal displays and products of sea and canneries."

SALMON PRICES ARE HIGH.

Opening of Fall Fishing at Astoria Sees Stiff Market.

ASTORIA, Ore., Sept. 14.—The fall fishing season on the Columbia river has opened and, owing to the markets, ten canneries on the lower river will run, while all the cold-storage plants will take steelheads for freezing.

The packers held a meeting and fixed the prices to be paid for raw fish at the highest rates which have ever prevailed during a fall season on the Columbia. The prices are 4 cents a pound for silversides, tules and fall salmon; 6 cents a pound for steelheads and 10 cents each for dog-fish.

BROOM CORN WILL REACH HIGH PRICE

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 14.—The new crop of broom corn is moving and some of the sales recorded are the highest in 30 years. One farmer in Douglas county sold nine tons yesterday for $160 a ton. Harvesting will be in full blast soon. It is said that the supply of broom corn this season will be limited and some growers are predicting that $200 a ton will be paid before the season is over.
